WE SELL FOR PROMPT CASH ONLY.—Our goods are marked at a rate of profit usual on wholesale transactions. We keep no books. FARMER and COMPANY.

CHILDREN'S COSTUMES.

5s 6d to 21s. Is it cardinal you seek? Here is one—a pretty costume in a Norwich rep, fit for a girl of 12, a body in the Langtry style, and tight-fitting skirt, with deep kilting at foot, tastefully trimmed with old gold—here a bow, there a bow—not too much trimming, not too little—all in good taste; price, 10s 6d. Or do you want a more sober tint? Look at this Oxford Beige. It would puzzle you to choose a better wearing dress. It looks warm, and soft, and good, and it is all it looks. The trimming is cardinal Satin de Lyon, and bespeaks the maker's care and cleverness. It is a well-made little dress; price, 12s 6d. There are hundreds of others, also, for our stock is very full just now, and there should be no difficulty in selecting. FARMER and CO.

MANTLES.

We have an enormous stock, all marked at wholesale prices. We cannot enumerate all the styles we have, but you could not name a shape, or design, or material, that we are not showing in full assortment. We have some splendid Black Cloth Dolmans, trimmed silk and fur, at 25s 6d, 27s 6d, 32s 6d, 42s, and up to 5 guineas. Then we show some of the nicest Ladies' Jackets possible to conceive. We commence these as low as 10s 6d, and we have every price up to 45s, about 1000 in all. We have also a nice parcel of Young Ladies' Jackets, with stylish plush hoods, various colours, price 35s. Our mantle department alone is well worth a visit.

FARMER'S.

MADE-UP COSTUMES.

There is more style in our made-up Costumes for Ladies' wear, of this season, than in any we can remember. We have them in a nice selection of Fancy Material at 32s 6d, 42s, 45s, 50s, and up to 5 Guineas. Then we are showing some splendid French Silk Costumes, from 5 to 12 Guineas. Of course every lady cannot fit herself with a ready-made costume, but look what a saving is accomplished by those who can.

FARMER and COMPANY.

LADIES' KID GLOVES.

NEW DRESS FABRICS, FOR 1881.

Ladies are invited to pay a visit of inspection to our large Dress Department, now fully stocked with the Newest Goods for the season. All marked in plain figures and lowest cash prices. We recommend Ladies who are unable to pay a personal visit, whether residing in town or country, to write for patterns. The mode of ordering by post is now adopted by thousands, and, owing to the completeness and efficiency of our Postal Order Department, we are enabled to supply all demands, however varied. To Ladies in the country this department is invaluable as it enables them to see a vast collection at their own homes.

LARGE SHIPMENT OF DRESSES, JUST OPENED:—

125 pieces Fancy Tweed, 8½d per yard
42 pieces Homespun Serges, 10½d per yard
100 pieces Heather Homespuns, a warm and soft wool texture, very durable, 14d
52 pieces Dark Shades of Wool Beige, a very sightly cloth, 14d per yard
64 pieces Extra Quality Beiges, a Winter substance, and new colourings, 16½d per yard
180 pieces Coloured Venetian Twills, extra wide, a very favourite dress in London two months ago—price then 2s per yard—now offered by us at 18½d.

SEVENTY-FOUR PIECES WINTER SATTARAS.

We direct attention to these really excellent dress materials with very great pleasure. Seldom, indeed, can we place before our patrons, at the price quoted, anything at all equal to the parcel now announced. From an eminent Lyons manufacturer, finished to the order of a New York firm, but made in larger quantity than required, the balance was offered to our Mr. William Farmer at a price that barely paid the cost of making. We quote these magnificent goods at 2s 11d for the double width. The wholesale price in Paris is 4½ francs—3s 7d, and they have never yet been sold under 5s per yard in Sydney. Splendid colourings, never-ending wear. Price, 2s 11d for the double width, equivalent to 1s 5½d for single. Patterns free. FARMER and COMPANY.

This is an advantage offered by no other house in Sydney, and it applies, be it remembered, to every department in our establishment. FARMER and COMPANY.

GENTLEMEN'S GLOVES.

"Hark you, mistris; what hidden virtue is in this glove that you should bid me weare it? Is't good against sore eyes, or will it charm the toothache? Or are these red tops being steept in white wine soluble, will't kill the itch? . . . . If it have none of these, and prove no more but a bare glove of halfe-a-crown a pair, 'twill be but halfe a courtesy." (Beaumont and Fletcher, "Scornful Lady," 1616.) "You can buy them at wholesale prices for prompt net cash." (FARMER and COMPANY, 1881.)

BOYS' CLOTHING.

The closest economy is exercised by us in preparing every article of Juvenile dress. We start our Boys' Suits at 7s 6d, then we rise 1s—8s 6d, then 10s 6d, 11s 6d, 12s 6d, 13s 6d, 14s 6d, 15s, 16s 6d, 17s 6d, 18s 6d, 21s, 22s 6d, 25s, 27s 6d, 30s, 32s 6d, 35s. At every one of these prices we can show an assortment that outnumbers by 5 to 1 what can be seen in any other establishment. There are all sorts and styles, Suits with and without braid, Sailor Suits, Man-of-war Suits, Don Suits, Hussar Suits, Oxford Suits, Austrian Suits, Norfolk Suits, Suits with bodies for little fellows just breeched, &c., &c. At 18s 6d we commence big Boys' Trousers Suits, and rise in various grades to 35s. You can save from 4s a suit on the smallest sizes, up to 12s 6d a suit on the largest, in every single suit you purchase, as compared with what can be bought elsewhere. 2000 Boys' Ulsters, and other Overcoats, commencing 8s 6d. FARMER'S.

WHITE SHIRTS.

We have a Clothing Factory in London, because skilled labour of the class we want is there at its best. We are certain that, over and above all other savings, some 15 per cent. is saved to our customers by this factory. We would have a shirt factory there as well, if the largest manufacturing shirt company in England had not come to our terms. We have made arrangements with this company that suit us on the whole as well as having a factory at present; and this arrangement has reference to certain standard makes of linen and calico that must be used in our shirts, and also to price. We commence our White Shirts for gentlemen at One Guinea the half-dozen. Then, our next price is 24s the half-dozen; then 27s; then 28s 6d, 30s, 33s, 36s, and 39s. We have some extra fine goods at 45s the half-dozen, quite equal to those we sold at 60s under our old credit system. FARMER and COMPANY.

RAILWAY RUGS,

at wholesale prices, commencing at 4s 9d and advancing to 55s. All grades—the Oxford, the Pelham, the Austrian, the Sealskin. Fully 2000 rugs to select from. No trade parcels. Our system affords the opportunity to private purchasers to make their selections in any quantity that may be required at wholesale prices for prompt cash. FARMER'S.

OXFORD-STREET TRAMWAYS.

Many gentlemen having felt themselves slighted in not being invited to join the deputation which waited upon the Premier in opposition to the enormous expenditure which would be incurred in the widening of Oxford-street, Mr. SYDNEY BURDEKIN takes this opportunity of making generally known that a deputation will within a few days wait upon the Minister for Works, to further impress upon the Government their strong objection to the proposed widening of this street, for which an agitation is still on foot, notwithstanding the decision of the Government to the contrary, and to urge the Government to take immediate action in giving the necessary accommodation by a complete double system, and the strong necessity which exists for flattening this important thoroughfare and paving it with wooden blocks. All gentlemen wishing to join in this deputation will kindly communicate as early as possible with Compressed gas for the illumination of buoys, according to the Times, is gradually coming into use. Ordinary coal-gas is not employed, but an oil-gas, manufactured upon Pintsch's system, which has been adapted by several railway companies for carriage lighting. The gas is produced by distilling the refuse of shale oil, the gaseous products being stored and used under pressure. The buoy is made of wrought iron, and is itself the receiver of the compressed gas for use. A lamp is mounted on the top, which will burn for six, nine, or twelve weeks with one filling, according to the capacity of the buoy. The Trinity House has had two of these buoys under trial, their performances having been reported on as satisfactory. One of these buoys was placed on the East Oaze station, about one and three-quarter miles from the Mouse lightship, on the 16th of last April, and remained at its station until the 28th January, when it was run into and damaged by a passing vessel. The Trinity House officials report that, during the period named, the light was burning without intermission, although it is stated by the officer in charge of the Mouse light vessel that, in bad weather, the buoy was at times hidden from view by the spray. The Clyde Lighthouse Trustees have also taken the matter up, and are building gasworks at Port Glasgow, on Pintsch's system, for the service of gas-lighted buoys on the Clyde. One of these buoys has been burning on the Roseneath Patch for some time past, being supplied with gas from London, and a second is about to be delivered by Pintsch's Lighting Company for use on the Clyde. Another of these buoys is about to be despatched by the company to Port Said for use on the Suez Canal. It is 7 feet in diameter, and will contain a sufficient supply of gas under pressure to give a light day and night for six weeks. The light burnt will be a red one, and the gas will be stored at a pressure of seven atmospheres, or 105lbs. per square inch. The estimated cost of the gas is only 2½d. for twenty-four hours' consumption. The process of filling these buoys can be carried out in a few minutes. The reservoir of gas under pressure is floated alongside them in a tender, and the gas is passed from the reservoir into the buoy by means of a flexible tube.

In the Import markets to-day business was quiet. In breadstuffs but little trade was done, and no change in quotations is to be noted. Owing to the holding of the grocers' annual picnic to-day, the attendance at Messrs. Fraser's auction sale of teas and groceries was small, and the bidding spiritless; and after the sales of about 200 half-chests at from 36s. 6d. to 37s. 6d., the balance of the catalogue was withdrawn for private sale. A quantity of plaid vestas was sold publicly at 3s. to 3s. 1d. Privately, business has been done in sugars at about late rates. In fish, a small line of salmon for Brisbane was taken up at 6s. 9d. in bond. Dried fruits are moving steadily—currants at 5½d., elemes 8d., sultanas 8½d.; and figs also had business at 10½d. Among other lines we note the quittance of a parcel of Edwards's preserved potatoes, in tins, at 60s. per cwt. In liquors a sale of champagne, Perriere Mousseux, in bond, at 30s, is reported; Lowndes's rum, in hogsheads, had business at 3s. 11d.; beer is dull of sale, but fair sales are reported of Pig and other leading brands of stout; a considerable parcel of Guinness's stout, by Griffin, was placed at a price withheld. In metals long lengths of galvanized iron continue scarce, and in demand at late quotations; No. 8 wire, White Cross, realized £15, and No. 10, £17. At the Darling Harbour sales this morning there was a small supply, and only a moderate attendance. Previous rates were maintained. There was no change in the aspect of business on the wharfs. The only change noticeable was that with regard to eggs, the supply of which had improved somewhat, causing them to be easier, and to sell at from 1s. 9d. to 2s. Prime quality butter is in good demand at 1s. 3d. Stocks of maize had become very much reduced, but were increased by the arrival of the Platypus (s.), with a cargo of 2000 bags. The hay market is well supplied, and best lucerne sells at £3; other sorts from £2 to £2 15s. Potatoes are unchanged, as also are onions.

Messrs. Fraser and Co. will sell, to-morrow morning, cigars, and in the afternoon a shipment of lumber ex City of New York.

Messrs. Mort and Co. offered only a small catalogue of wool at their auction sale to-day. The lots sold brought prices about equal to those lately ruling. Medium scoured realised up to 16½d. and greasy 8½d. per lb., the demand for the former being less marked than at previous sales. Among the lots disposed of were:—EP, 6 bales fleece at 15d.; JH over New England, 8 grease at 8d.; JG over S in diamond, 19 scoured at 16½d., 18 seconds at 14½d., 8 crossbred at 15d.; PD & Co. over N, 8 grease at 8d., 5 pieces at 6½d.; and a number of smaller lots, at prices ranging up to 8½d. for greasy and 15½d. for scoured. Sheepskins were again in brisk demand, and a heavy catalogue was cleared at the following range of values:—Say 2½d. to 4½d. for short-woolled, 5d. to 6½d. for medium, and 8d. per lb. for washed.

Mr. John Bridge submitted a catalogue of wool and sheepskins to-day. For wool the prices ruled the same as at previous sales, but sheepskins were ¼d. to ½d. higher.

It will be seen from the foregoing table that the trade of the port for the first four months of the year shows an increase of fully 21 per cent. on that of the corresponding months of last year, the imports being over 22 per cent. more, and the exports showing an excess of 20 per cent.

A special cablegram to the Argus, under date London, May 6, mentions that

"A deputation from the British and Intercolonial Trade and Tariff Union, including amongst its members Mr. W. Westgarth, Mr. F. T. Sargood, and the Lord Mayor of London (Alderman M'Arthur), have waited on the Earl of Kimberley, Secretary of State for the Colonies, and suggested that there should be an enlargement of the powers of the Royal Commission on the Defences in British Possessions under the Crown, so as to include also an inquiry into the commerce of the various possessions and colonies. It was suggested that evidence should be taken in various centres of the British Empire in relation to tariffs; and further, that the Imperial Government, where treaties were concerned, should endeavour to learn beforehand the views of the colonies interested. The deputation also urged the importance of a Customs union. Lord Kimberley, in reply, said that Great Britain was always glad to listen to any suggestions. His lordship's speech on the subject was chiefly directed to a recommendation of the principles of free trade, in which he said Australia was progressing."

The Sydney Morning Herald.

THURSDAY, MAY 12, 1881.

Our Melbourne correspondent's last letter referred to the probability of another outbreak of bushranging in the district lately the haunt of the Kelly gang, and still infested by the relatives, friends, and admirers of its members. His remarks were in agreement with official information, as contained in the report of Superintendent Chomley, after a special visit to the locality. According to a notice of the matter in the Argus, "there are about a dozen youths and men belonging to what is termed in the district 'the Kelly clique' who might take to the bush at any moment." The more dangerous characters are in an organized state. Horsestealing has become prevalent. Some large saws have been stolen, with the object, it is supposed, of obtaining plates for armour. Revenge for the destruction of the late gang is threatened, and a reign of terror has so far been re-established that residents of the district who have been giving information to the police, and who have been identified through the publication of evidence at the late inquiry, are seeking to provide for their own safety by flight. If affairs were in a healthy condition, it would be the abettors and accomplices of the late gang who would find the country too hot to hold them. As it is, the danger lies with the men who have served the cause of the country and justice, and they are escaping under the fear that the State is not strong enough to afford them efficient protection. A clearer indication of the disturbance and demoralization which the long-continued freedom of the late gang caused could hardly be given, and the lessons taught by it should be well weighed.

One of these appears to be that the actual punishment of lawlessness may be of less importance and influence than the manner and time of its infliction. No one can deny that the Kelly gang met the most miserable of fates. But their punishment came after a long delay, and a long term of successful defiance of the law and its officers. It came, even then, almost by accident. If a brave man had not, at the risk of his life, given warning to the police train, the gang might have escaped under cover of a greater crime than any committed before in their career. But however profitable to others may be the reflection that sooner or later crime meets with its deserts, it may make all the difference to the minds of reckless men to be taught that the punishment is likely to come later rather than sooner, that there is room for speculating upon a long run of luck, and that perhaps even tardy punishment may be evaded.

If it cost the State some £30,000 to hunt down the Kelly gang, and at last destroy it, the truer economy would have been to expend that amount at the very beginning of the gang's career. Such an outlay at the outset would have appeared enormous and extravagant; but if it had been made, and with success, there would have been better returns to show for it. Now the money has been spent, and, to all appearances, a great deal more will have to follow it in the attempt to prevent another gang from taking the field, or in carrying on another campaign, should that attempt be unsuccessful. If half the sum had been spent at first in vigorous and well-judged operations the power of the law would have been asserted promptly, and crime would have shrunk under cover with trembling. By the long delay the weakness of the law has been proclaimed, the power of crime to defy it has been illustrated, terror has passed upon the supporters of the law rather than upon its violators, and a whole district has been demoralised. In all cases it is desirable that crime should be detected and punished with promptitude; but in cases where crime takes the field against the law, and boldly strives to dominate over society, no effort should be spared, no cost is too great, to bring the offenders speedily under the heavy hand of justice. It should not be left in doubt for any considerable time whether the law could or could not be thus openly defied with impunity.

The time may come when respect for the law will be with all men a matter of conscience—when they will observe the law because they think they ought to. But in the meantime there are many—whole classes, probably—who simply observe the law because, and so far as, they fear inconvenient consequences from breaking it. To a large proportion of these, again, this fear is a matter of tradition and mental habit. They abstain from crime because they take it for granted that crime will be punished. By this fear and this habit of thought much money is saved to the State. They may be regarded as a sort of moral reserve, supplementing the strength and increasing the preventive efficiency of the police force; and it is of extreme importance that they should not be suffered to dissipate or decay. To bring them up to their full influence is the work of generations; but as we have seen in the history of the Kelly case, they may be well-nigh destroyed by weakness or mismanagement in the administration of the law within a single year. Youths who have grown up from childhood to early manhood with a belief that justice has a long arm and a strong hand will soon discard that belief after a few successful ventures in defiance of the law, just as the scooped turnip and candle lose their terrors for the boy who dares an encounter. Where there are natural facilities for crime, and its growth is, nevertheless, kept down by a wholesome dread of the officers of justice, it is the worst possible policy, even on the low ground of economy, to suffer that dread to be diminished or destroyed by laxity in the treatment of even small offences.

Mr. Gresley Lukin has for some time past been working to form an association of capitalists to construct some connecting lines of railway that will have the effect of uniting the three systems of Queensland, New South Wales, and South Australia. The suggestion for such an undertaking has been found in the land-grant system, which the Queensland Government has adopted as an inducement to capitalists to enter upon such works. The great line to promote which this principle has been adopted is one to connect Brisbane with the Gulf of Carpentaria; and this can be done by starting from Roma, the present terminus of the Great Western Railway of Queensland, and terminating at Port Parker, the newly-discovered harbour on the south-western coast of the Gulf of Carpentaria. The route for this line is being surveyed by Mr. Watson, and the Government is exerting itself to encourage the formation of a company of English capitalists to embark in the venture.

Leaving this project to stand on its own merits, to connect two seas, and to open up a new port, Mr. Lukin turns aside more to the south, and starts another project for uniting the existing capitals of Australia at a central point in Queensland, and also with the line to Carpentaria. Taking Roma as the starting place he proposes to go westward as far as Charleville, and then descend by the Warrego River to the Queensland boundary to a point north of Bourke, and distant from it only eighty-five miles. That short gap filled in would establish a direct connection with Sydney, and, of course, with Melbourne. A second line would make for the south-west corner of the colony, a distance of 600 miles from Roma; but when this point is reached it would be distant only 180 miles from the "Government Gums," to which point the South Australian Government is now constructing a railway as the first section of a trans-continental line. The country to be traversed by these two proposed lines is already under pastoral occupation, and enough is known of it to enable Mr. Lukin to say that there are no serious engineering difficulties to be met with, and that the country is of good quality and sufficiently timbered. His proposal is to construct it on the basis of the land grants which the Queensland Government will give in conformity with the law now passed; and these grants are sufficiently liberal to admit of an average price of ten shillings an acre, returning the capital with a profit. A much higher price than that has been obtained for the land within the railway reserve at Roma.

Of course, the Queensland Act only applies to that part of the line which could be made within that colony; and the co-operation, therefore, of the Governments of New South Wales and South Australia would be required to make the scheme complete. As to our own colony, the Government has already sanctioned a line from Dubbo to Bourke, and its extension northward up the valley of the Warrego would be a very easy matter. But it is probable that the Government, having at present all its railway system in its own hands, would prefer making that extension itself to handing it over to any private company. In fact, if it would pay a private company to do the work it would also pay our Government, provided that the Government indemnified itself in the same way out of land sales as it is proposed the company should do. There is no reason, in the nature of things, why a Government should not treat its own railway capital account as liberally as the Queensland Government proposes to treat that of strangers; and the very temptation which that Government holds out to foreign capitalists is an argument in favour of the Government applying the principle of railway reserves to its own undertakings. The only reason why the Queensland Government is so liberal in its offer of land to outside capitalists is that it desires to see the railway made without delay; but, as it has almost exhausted its borrowing powers, it is not in a position to raise the necessary capital itself. All these land-grant schemes require, in order to be successful, that a sufficiency of capital should be raised in the first instance. The land which is to be enhanced in value by the railway will ultimately replace this capital, and with a good interest to boot. But the line must be made before the increment of value can be properly realised; and any attempt to carry out these speculations without solid money to begin with is likely to lead to a collapse. It may be remembered that it was the attempt to do without initiatory capital that caused the failure at first of the Illinois Railway Company, which has since been a great success. The theory of the project was sound, but the promoters wanted to do without money, and to work on the credit which their anticipated profits would give. They got into debt and difficulty, because their outlay was immediate, they had to pay a high interest for borrowed money, whilst their land asset was slowly realised, and the traffic took time to develop. Capitalists who embark in enterprises of this kind must be content to put solid money down, and trust to picking it up afterwards with a good increment. But it is obvious that what capitalists can do Government can do if it only has the credit to raise the initiatory capital. New South Wales is in that position; and if we adopted the system of railway reserves we could recover to a large extent, out of the estate we improved, the cost of its improvement. Queensland has not the same borrowing power, and is, therefore, fain to let the profit of such enterprise pass to capitalists who are willing to incur the risk.

As to the Government of South Australia, it is not unwilling to encourage private enterprise. Indeed, many years ago it offered land grants to promote the construction of the line from Port Augusta to the "Government Gums," and is now itself making the line because no company would take the work up. It may be willing to leave the northern extension of this line to private capitalists; but, so far as such extension has yet been planned, a line pretty due north has been suggested in preference to one to the corner of the colony. All questions, however, as to the route are matter for survey and subsequent discussion. In any case, the line going to the north-east boundary of the colony must join the Queensland extension somewhere, and by so doing would make a route from Adelaide to Brisbane, as well as Adelaide to Point Parker. The suggested line from Adelaide to Port Darwin would in all probability be carried to the westward of Lake Frome, and follow the telegraph route. It has been said, however, that that route which followed M'DOUGALL's, STUART's exploratory track, is not the best, crossing the continent from south to north, and that better country is to be found to the eastward of it. Of course the object of the South Australian Government is to open up its own interior, and to connect Port Adelaide and Port Darwin. But a line eastward of the great lake depression, connecting with the Queensland system, would not be in any way inconsistent with a line to the westward and north-westward; and if the Government does not care to undertake such a line itself, it might be very well pleased to see the work done by a a private company, and quite willing to give the necessary encouragement.

The recent meeting of residents of Pyrmont opposed to the removal of the bridge was not held without cause. The case of the bridge is not analogous to that of a public road in the sense that the removal of the one would exactly correspond with the closing of the other. The bridge is only a private way, used by the public on payment for the convenience it affords; and if at the time when the receipts failed to yield a profit to the proprietors it had been destroyed by fire, the proprietors would not have been obliged to rebuild, and the public would have had to submit to the loss of the facilities it had provided. But if the Government purchased the bridge for the purpose of removing it, the act of removal would be in the nature of a public grievance, and people on the other side who now use the bridge would have a substantial hardship to complain of. The same remarks would apply, though in an inferior degree, if the Government removed the bridge and set up a ferry in its place. And it would be a self-contradictory policy to endeavour at one and the same time to create a larger trade on the western side of Darling Harbour, by making it the terminus of the railways for goods traffic, and to lessen the means of communication between it and the eastern side. If the development and necessities of the trade of Sydney could have been foreseen before the bridge was built and the wharf was made, the head of the harbour would probably have been reclaimed as far as Bathurst-street; and then there would have been no need for a bridge, for means would have been provided for both wharfage and comparatively direct communication. But, as matters stand, the removal of the bridge should at least be postponed until there is proof of its necessity. The railway should first be extended, the wharf should also be continued along the western shore; and, meanwhile, the opening in the bridge should be enlarged so as to let any vessel likely to go to the wharf pass through. It would then be well to try by actual experience whether vessels would seek berths in Upper Darling Harbour, and whether the bridge in its improved state offered any considerable obstruction to trade. If it did, the removal of the bridge might be consented to as a matter of necessity; but if it did not, the bridge might remain, and the public who use it might be saved a serious loss. It is hard to see why the trade should suffer if the opening were enlarged; for it would not be worse for ships to pass to and from the head of Darling Harbour than into and out of the docks on the Thames.

America continues to exult in, and to profit by, the rush of immigrants to her shores. In all parts of Europe people have learned to direct across the Atlantic a hopeful eye, and every local disturbance, every period of hardship, or apprehension of war which sets people in motion, results in America gaining in population almost all that Europe loses. It is worthy of the attention of those among our own colonists who combine the talents of the demagogue with the instincts of the Conservative, that the Americans accord to these intruders the most cordial of welcomes. These dull fellows, the Yankees, who are notorious for not knowing what is good for their own interest, have failed to attain the keenness of insight possessed by some Australian patriots, which recognizes immigration as a disaster, and every new arrival as a competitor in business. Yet the Great Republic continues, to all appearance, to develop with extraordinary strides, and maintains, despite the fearful influx of muscle and brains which spreads over the territory and afflicts the community, an apparent prosperity which shows no obvious diminution. All these must, of course, be fallacious appearances. No country ravaged by the curse of immigration, as America has been and is, can possibly prosper, if there be any force or justice in the system of our own anti-immigration doctrinaires. It is true, indeed, that there is a shade of distinction. Here, those who are in the colony pay to assist others to come. In America the State pays to receive them and to distribute them only. But the difference is only in kind, not in principle, and is totally insufficient to account for the evidences of progress which America presents. Her people must surely be standing on a mine, ready to explode, or on a rotten shell of mock prosperity, liable any day to collapse and sink them all to the ruin which immigration has been for years preparing. There is here surely an opportunity and a duty. For opponents of immigration a missionary enterprise is here disclosed. To men of their penetration of insight and self-abnegation of principle, to save a whole continent—forty millions of people, and still increasing—should appear a pressing duty. Let them, therefore, depart for the unhappy United States, and, taking their stand opposite the gates of Castle Garden, lift their voices in testimony of the evils and injuries which wait upon a new country that encourages immigration. We, at least, would not raise a finger to stay their departure, had we power to imagine how New South Wales could possibly get on without their industry—in talking.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

FROM Cape Town we learn that the Royal Commission appointed in regard to affairs in the Transvaal met at Newcastle on the 28th April; the members present were Sir Hercules Robinson, Sir Evelyn Wood, and Sir J. H. de Villiers, Chief Justice of Cape Colony. Sir Hercules was awaiting a successful issue to the mediation between the Basutos and the colonial Government. In the meantime the Transvaal remained in a very unsettled condition, and many acts of violence on the part of the Boers have been reported. The Customs receipts of the colony have been so far affected by the war, as to show a decrease of £20,000 in three months; however, a peaceful termination to the affair is now looked for. The new Ministry had already been met with a want of confidence motion; the motion, it was expected, would be defeated by a small majority. Both Houses of Parliament had passed a bill authorising a loan of two millions for war expenses, and they had also passed an address of congratulation to her Majesty on the cessation of hostilities.

THE Military Defences Inquiry Commission met yesterday afternoon, at the Supreme Court. Sir James Martin presided, and all the members of the Commission, with the exception of Colonel Anderson and Colonel Downes, were present. The business of the meeting was the consideration of the report and evidence received from the Military Committee, and a lengthy discussion took place. The Commission afterwards adjourned until Monday next, but the Military Committee will sit to-day, and before the next meeting of the Commission the committee will have prepared and distributed their final report.

IN the Banco Court yesterday the case of Moore and another v. Haynes and another was heard until 1 o'clock, when the Court was adjourned to this morning. In the Jury Court, Wakeford v. The Commissioner of Railways was heard before the Chief Justice and a jury of four. The jury assessed the damages at £850. In the Equity Court, his Honor the Primary Judge gave some important directions as to the course to be pursued in settling issues under the new Equity Act. They will be found in another column.

AT the sittings of the Court of Quarter Sessions, which were resumed yesterday morning, before Mr. Justice Windeyer, Otto Herman, convicted on the previous day of unlawfully wounding his wife, was sentenced to six months' imprisonment, with hard labour, in Darlinghurst gaol. Robert Williams, charged with murder, was proved to be insane, and an order was made for his confinement during his Excellency's pleasure. The charge against Henry William Brown, for a criminal assault on a little girl under 12 years of age, was proceeded with, and lasted until half-past 5 p.m., when the jury returned a verdict of guilty, and the prisoner was sentenced to three years' hard labour in Darlinghurst gaol, the severest penalty allowed by the law. The Court adjourned at 6 o'clock till this morning.

AN advertisement, which appears elsewhere, states that plans, showing the proposed alignment of a number of streets in Denison Ward, are now lying at the office of the City Surveyor for public inspection. Any person interested in property in any of the streets which are enumerated, desiring to offer objections against the proposed alignments, will have to do so within one month.

WE learn by telegram from Adelaide that the New South Wales representatives to the Wesleyan General Conference have arrived at Adelaide, all well.

A MEETING of the Victoria (Philosophical) Institute of England took place on the 21st of February, at 7, Adelphi-terrace, London, when a paper "On the Implements of the Stone Age as a Primitive Demarcation between Man and other Animals," by the late Dr. Thompson, LL.D., of Harvard University, was read; after which a second brief paper, "On the Caves of Devonshire," was read by Mr. Howard, F.R.S., in which the author, as a chemist, pointed out the important bearing that the new investigations into the mode of formation of the cave floors had upon the whole question at issue, a bearing so important as to nullify all the calculations as to their age hitherto so persistently advanced. We observe that the object of this society is to investigate impartially all questions of Philosophy and Science said to militate against the truth of Revelation; and it appears that last year nearly half the new members were American or Colonial, and this proportion has not lessened this year, especially as all wishing the society well are eligible as associates—a subscription of one guinea entitling them to the year's publications.

THE Hunter's Hill and Gladesville Horticultural Society held their monthly meeting in the Council-chambers, Hunter's Hill, on Monday evening last. The large amount of interest taken in the society by the inhabitants of the districts was evidenced by the numerous attendance. Prizes were offered for ferns and vegetables. There were three entries for "the best six ferns." Mr. Owen, who was represented by his gardener (Mr. Parcell), showed very good plants of Maclophia hirta cristata, Scolopendrium cristatum, Lastrœa felex mas cristatum, Adiantum Farleyensis, Gonopteris punigera, Onychinum japonicum. Dr. Joseph, represented by Mr. Myerscough, had very well grown plants of Adiantum Farleyensis, Asplenium Veitchii, Polypodium palmata, Menisciinm palmatre, Blechnum Braziliense, and a Pteris, from Lord Howe Island. Mr. C. J. Manning (who did not attach the names to his plants) secured the prize with six well-shaped plants. Mr. Owen was awarded the prize for vegetables, the collection being a remarkably fine one, numbering fully forty varieties. The non-competitive exhibits were as follow:—By Mrs. Weeks, hand bouquet; Miss Amy Weeks, buttonhole bouquet; Mrs. Fitzsimmons, collection of cut flowers; Mr. D'Ardier, very nice collection of cut flowers; Mr. Garrick, seven pot plants, amongst which was a good plant of Maranta zabrina, Acalphia Brownii, and Gymnogramma dobroydina, also a tray of cut flowers, and three very large pumpkins from imported French seed; Mrs. Weeks, collection of cut flowers; Mr. Owen, three ferns, a fine plant of Calanthe veratrifolium, and a collection of cut flowers, including the bloom of Streletzia Regina; Dr. Joseph, seven ferns and nine large trays of cut flowers, including a splendid collection of chrysanthemums; Mr. C. J. Manning, seven ferns, the adiantums being worthy of special mention, cut flowers and a collection of vegetables. The meeting was brought to a close at about 9 o'clock by the distribution of the cut flowers.

THE New South Wales Alliance for the Suppression of Intemperance held their usual weekly meeting in the Temperance Hall last evening. Mr. J. Davies, C.M.G., presided. Messrs. John Plummer and Peters addressed the meeting. There was a large and attentive audience, and a large number of names was added to the pledge book.

ON Tuesday evening about eighty members of the Grand Lodge of New South Wales of Freemasons sat down to a banquet in the Masonic Temple, the grand master, James Squire Farnell, in the chair. The banquet was supplied by Messrs. Wright and Adams, the caterers for the metropolitan lodges, and was recherché. After due justice had been done to the good things provided, the Grand Master called upon the brethren to drink the health of her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen. "God save the Queen" was then sung by Bro. Machen, the grand organist, the whole of the brethren joining, all standing. The Grand Master then called upon the brethren to join in drinking the health of R. W. Deputy Grand Master (Bro. A. W. Manning), to whom he now had the pleasure of presenting a valuable past master's jewel, on behalf of the brethren generally who had subscribed thereto. He had great pleasure in testifying to Bro. Manning's most exemplary bearing, both as an excellent citizen and a good mason. Bro. A. W. Manning responded, thanking the Grand Master and brethren generally for their expressions of esteem. None could be more desirous than he was to see every good man in the community becoming a mason; and if they were good masons they were indeed good and loyal citizens. He trusted that ere long, as New South Wales had its own political constitution, one and all would be banded together under the Grand Lodge of New South Wales, to which body he was most sincerely attached. He intended to wear the beautiful jewel with which he had been invested to-night at every masonic meeting which he attended, and hoped that his worthy brother, the Grand Master, would live to see the Grand Lodge of New South Wales attain the highest state of power and wisdom. The jewel presented to Bro. Manning is from the workshop of Messrs. Horn and Petersen, and is of most exquisite workmanship; it is of solid gold, enriched with a large diamond and rubies.

THE third of a series of lectures on "Political Economy" was delivered by the Rev. E. G. Hodgson, M.A., last night, in the Technological College connected with the School of Arts. A few persons only were present, the subject apparently not being one of general interest at present. The lecturer chose for special treatment "The requisites of production—capital." He pointed out that, besides the primary and universal requisite of production—labour and natural agents—there was another requisite, without which no productive operations beyond the rude and scanty beginnings of primitive labour were possible—namely, a stock previously accumulated of the produce of former labour, which was termed capital. This he defined as that part of wealth destined to assist future production by providing shelter, protection, tools, and materials for the work required, and to feed and otherwise maintain labourers during the process of production. It was divided into circulating and fixed wealth. Capital which fulfilled the whole of its office in the production in which it was engaged by a single use was termed circulating. That which existed in a durable shape, and was not destroyed by a single use, was termed fixed capital. The rev. gentleman next proceeded to point out that capital rendered possible the division of labour, the execution of large works, and the production of commodities which could not be produced without it. It saved labour in the production of almost every species of commodities, and enabled a people to execute work better and more expeditiously than they could without it. The remainder of the lecture was devoted to the enunciation of theorems described as fundamental propositions respecting capital.

A SOIRÉE was held in the Church of England, Granville, last night, which was very successful. The Revs. Messrs. Vaughan, Gunther, and Phillips addressed the meeting, and a sum of £118 was collected in aid of the building fund. The proceeds of the soiree and concert amounted to £25. The concert afterwards was largely attended, over 600 being present. Every hope was expressed that in a short time the church will be erected on a grand site close to Granville station.

THE grocers' annual picnic was held at the Sir Joseph Banks pavilion yesterday, and was one of the most successful that has taken place under the auspices of that body of tradesmen. At 10 a.m. a large number of omnibuses and other vehicles started in procession from Wynyard-square, and immediately after arrival at the pavilion at Botany dancing was commenced, the Young Australian Band being engaged for the occasion. Early in the afternoon an excellent dinner was provided in the pavilion by Mr. Frank Smith, of which about 450 persons partook. Mr. J. M'Clelland (of M'Clelland and Roach) presided, and proposed the toasts of "The Queen" and "The Prince of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family." The health of "His Excellency the Governor" was proposed by Mr. Kelly (of J. Barlow and Co.). Mr. Thomas M'Clelland proposed "The Employers," and in doing so referred to the fact that certain members of the trade had declined to close their establishments for the day, thereby depriving their employees of an opportunity of participating in the demonstration, and he expressed the hope that customers would mark their disapproval of the action by declining to purchase at the establishments he had indicated. The other toasts were—"The Employees," proposed by Mr. Tillock and responded to by Mr. Richards; "The Ladies," proposed in a humorous speech by Mr. Allen, and responded to by Mr. Dymock; and "The Press," proposed by Mr. Lavers. The remainder of the afternoon was devoted to dancing and sports; and shortly after 5 o'clock the company returned to town, after having spent a most enjoyable day.

THE tramway extension to Woollahra, which has been constructed as far as the Woollahra Council-chambers, by way of Queen-street and Ocean-street, will be opened for general traffic on Tuesday next; but special cars will be run on Monday night, for the accommodation of gentlemen who intend to be present at the public banquet to be given to Mr. W. J. Trickett, M.L.A. It is proposed that passengers for Woollahra shall proceed as far as Queen-street by the tramcars for the Waverley line, and a motor will meet the cars at Queen-street, and, without any necessity for the passengers to leave the cars, take them on to the Woollahra terminus. This will be only a temporary arrangement, pending the laying of a double line of rails; but as only one motor can at present be spared for this service it will not be possible for a time to work the Woollahra traffic more frequently than by every second train to Waverley. Tenders have been invited for the construction of the tramways from Campbelltown to Camden, from Marrickville to Newtown Bridge, and from Botany to Redfern; and the necessary plans are being prepared for the tramways to the Glebe, from Newtown into Sydney, and from Sydney to Cook's River.

FOR some days past suspicious characters have been prowling about Waverley, and particularly that part of it known as Chesterfield, the residence of Mr. Macpherson, the Mayor of the borough. On Monday night two sons of this gentleman observed two men planted under a fence near the house, apparently taking moonlight observations; and on Tuesday night, about 10 o'clock, the servant, on going to close the shutters of the kitchen, saw a man inside the fence, who made off as soon as he was discovered and chased. Lately two men have been about—one begging clothes for children, and telling a pitiful story which scarcely accords with his general cheerful appearance; and the other collecting money for purposes which, on inquiry, were found to exist only in the mind of the collector. In both cases the object is, no doubt, to survey the premises, with the view to further nocturnal operations. Bondi and Waverley are under the protection of one policeman, who is supposed to do that which can only be done partially by half-a-dozen members of the force. Representations, we are informed, have been made of the want of more police protection for this large borough, but up to the present time without any result.

A CORRESPONDENT informs us by telegraph that eighteen town lots in the village of Murwillumbah, Tweed River, were offered for sale by auction yesterday. All were sold, the highest price being £122 10s. per acre.

A COLLISION between a tram and a cab took place at the corner of Elizabeth and Goulburn streets on Friday afternoon. The cab, which contained a passenger, was proceeding towards the railway station, and occupying the near side of the road. The collision occurred alongside of the Crown Hotel. At that spot the tram line was being repaired, and a quantity of sand and stones obstructed the narrow piece of roadway existing between the metals and the footpath. The motor struck the cab, breaking the springs and doing other damage, as well as causing the driver to be thrown backwards from his seat. The passenger escaped injury by jumping out. The most singular thing connected with the occurrence is that, although it is five days since it took place, neither the driver of the motor nor any one else connected with the tram seems to have thought it to be his duty to report the matter to the Superintendent of Tramways.

THE Chinaman named So Ho, who was taken to the Infirmary on Monday night, has died in that institution. So Ho was found in a much debilitated condition in Webster-square, Kent-street. The man died from the effects of debility.

ABOUT 9 o'clock last evening a young woman of respectable appearance was taken to the Infirmary by constable Alger, who saw her fall down in George-street in a fit. He went over to her and found she was also bleeding at the mouth. She remains in the Infirmary in a weak state, and up to a late hour last night was described as being unconscious. She is about 22 years of age, of medium height, and having brown hair, cut short on forehead. She had on a grey lustre dress, birdskin hat, white woollen cloud, patent leather boots, and wore a gold brooch. In her delirium she spoke both French and English.

THE following cases received attention at the Infirmary yesterday:—Daniel Hamill, mate of the Ocean Bride, wound on the back of his head, said to have been inflicted by another man, who it is alleged, struck him and caused him to fall on the pavement, at the corner of Market and Kent streets; Joseph Crook, Gibbs-street, injury to forearm, the result of a collision between two vehicles; William Armour, Clarence-street, wound on the back of the head; George Bedwell, Meyer-street, injury to leg, caused by falling from a building.

A REMARKABLE robbery of books (the Melbourne Daily Telegraph reports) was committed at Cole's Book Arcade by a man giving the name of William Henry Williamson, 30 years of age, and following no occupation. He, amongst many others, entered the arcade about 9 o'clock, with a black bag in one of his hands, and busied himself with an apparent inspection of the multitude of works exhibited for sale. He remained in the arcade for some time, and no suspicion was attached to him by the attendants until a lad happened to perceive him expertly putting a book under his waistcoat. Constable Sheridan was then called in, and Williamson's pockets and bag found to be full of the most expensive and convenient sized religious works the arcade contained, the whole being roughly valued at £9. He had even put as many as he could under his vest and inside his shirt. About 30 books were found to have been stolen by him.

BY the ketch Korunah, which arrived a few days ago in Hobart, from Port Davey, via Southport, Mr. W. Sherwin, the owner of the whaling barque Marie Laurie (says the Hobart Mercury), received from Captain Smith, of that vessel, the barb end of a harpoon, which was found buried in the blubber of a large whale captured a short time ago by the Marie Laurie. The "iron," from its description, is supposed to be of some age, and is considered by Captain Smith to have been in the whale about 20 years. The piece of the harpoon, which measures about a foot, has been preserved in a good state by its being in the blubber, while an inch or two of it which was sticking out gave indications of the exposed part having been rusted away. The harpoon is branded B. Hope, and from this it is inferred that it belonged to an American whaling barque which cruised in these seas many years ago. Whether this is the case or not, competent authorities state that the harpoon is a very old one, and of a kind which is not used nowadays, although formerly in use on American whalers. The harpoon is to be presented to the Museum, where it will form an interesting relic of olden times.

THE Imperial Band, under the leadership of Mr. W. H. Smith, will perform this (Thursday) evening at 8, on Hyde Park. The following is the programme:—March, "Jenny Darling," Metcalfe; quadrille, "Invincible," E. Lecomte; polka, "Hassendean," R. Smith; waltz, "Blue Danube," Strauss; march (sacred), "The Mighty Saviour," E. Newton; lancers, "The Royal," Schweidmann; waltz, "H.M.S. Pinafore," arranged by W. H. Smith; polka, "Bric-à-Brac," Coote; "God Save the Queen."

PORT DARWIN CIRCUIT COURT.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PALMERSTON, WEDNESDAY.

The Port Darwin Circuit Court closed to-day. Wandy Wandy, a native, for the murder of Wingfield, at Crocker Island, was sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment. Jemmy Miller, Mandel, and Jackey, natives, for the murder of Robert Edward Holmes, at Collett's Creek, were sentenced to imprisonment for life, 15 years', and 10 years' imprisonment respectively. Two cases against Chinamen, for perjury and robbery with violence, were dismissed.

FIRE IN GEORGE-STREET.

Shortly after 1 o'clock this morning a fire broke out in the establishment of Mr. J. J. Curran, wholesale grocer, &c., 592, George-street. The fire was first noticed at 20 minutes past 1 o'clock, by a watchman named Laurence Ryan, and simultaneously it was noticed by constable M'Cloughey, who was on duty in Castlereagh-street. Flames were then issuing from a large weatherboard store which adjoined another (the main) building which is built of stone. The constable went to the stables and set three horses at liberty, while the watchman went and gave the alarm. Superintendent Bown's brigade was the first to arrive, and was followed immediately afterwards by a large number of engines belonging to other companies. The fire spread to the main store communicating with the eaves, but was compelled to relinquish its hold there. The fire was then confined to the weatherboard store, which, together with its contents, was totally destroyed. The goods in the main building, consisting principally of tea, general groceries, and sewing-machines, were much damaged by water. Those in the wetherboard store consisted of kerosene, candles, matches, &c., and were valued at about £5000. The damage done to the goods in the main building had not been estimated when we went to press. The fire was eventually extinguished shortly after 2 o'clock. The merchandise in the two stores was insured in various offices for £12,000.

OXFORD-STREET TRAMWAYS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—After careful perusal of the letter from Mr. Burdekin in your issue of yesterday, we beg the favour of space to comment upon some of the statements made therein.

In the first place, we demur to the remark that "Oxford-street is not a street in which a carriage business has ever been, or will (even without the tramways) ever be done." This we boldly contradict, and can confidently assert (as we did personally to Mr. Burdekin yesterday) that one of the largest carriage trades (for the length of the street) has been done in our hitherto busy thoroughfare. Amongst those who have been favoured with the greatest proportion of carriage patronage is one of Mr. Burdekin's own tenants. As to his prophecy of not doing it in the future, it will entirely depend upon the action of the Government in reference to the tramway.

The next assertion to which we object is as follows:—"With respect to the statements made as to the injury to the trade of the street, I can confidently say, as far as the north side is concerned from College-street to Riley-street, that they are unfounded." A direct contradiction to this statement was made when a number of them signed a petition to oppose a second line of rails, as it would be ruinous to trade. His experience unfortunately differs largely from our own in this matter, and will not tally with our cash books, which we claim to be the best test of declining business since the introduction of tramways. Our bankers (if permitted) can add very conclusive testimony in support of our position that trade has been most seriously injured. The construction of the first line was looked upon by us with serious misgivings, but believing it to be a public boon we did not offer any opposition. Our practical experience, however, is such that we cannot but strongly object to the laying down of a second line.

We feel in duty bound to express our regret at the unkind insinuations thrown upon our South Sydney representatives. They have most ably supported us from a high sense of public duty only, and we are glad to state also we have had very hearty support from several other city and country members. We fully believe their only aim has been to promote a great public necessity and safeguard from danger.

In conclusion, Mr. Burdekin seems to forget that the residents of Oxford-street, with their 190 business establishments, form no inconsiderable portion of the trading community. We have a higher opinion of the fairness and justice of public opinion generally than to suppose the claims of such a large number of industrious tradesmen are to be entirely ignored.

We gladly take the present opportunity of publicly tendering you our sincere thanks for the broad and liberal manner in which you have treated this great public question, and remain, &c.,

HENRY FRENCH } Hon.
Sydney, May 11. M. C. BOHRSMANN } Secs.

AN OPTICAL ILLUSION.—In Comptes Rendus, M. Charpentier describes that, fixing his eyes immovably on a sky illuminated by a uniform white light, and moving two fingers of his right hand rapidly and alternately backwards and forwards before them, he saw, after a minute, a remarkable change in the uniform aspect of the heavens. There appeared on a white ground a mosaic composed of rather deep violet-purple hexagons, separated from each other by white lines, and forming a very regular design. The oscillations of the fingers should be from 300 to 400 per minute. He thinks that these hexagons are due to the cones in the fovea and in the yellow spot, and that the white lines are due to their intervals.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

AFFAIRS AT THE TRANSVAAL.

CAPE TOWN, APRIL 29.

The Royal Commission appointed to consider the state of affairs at the Transvaal met at Newcastle on the 28th, the members present being Sir Hercules Robinson, Sir Evelyn Wood, and Sir J. H. de Villiers, Chief Justice of Cape Colony. The latter left for Natal yesterday, but his Excellency the Governor will not go for a few days, it being understood that he is delayed by the hopes of a successful issue of the mediation between the Basutos and the Colonial Government. The Transvaal is in a very unsettled condition, and many cases of violence on the part of the Boers are reported. Commandant Croinze has admitted that he suppressed the news of the armistice, and so gained the capitulation of Patchefstroom. Major Lanyon has arrived at Newcastle, on his way to England. The Natal Customs, owing to the state of affairs in the Transvaal, have decreased £20,000 in three months. The war in Basutoland makes little progress, although a further advance has been made into the enemy's country. Two interviews have taken place between the Governor's agent and the rebel chief, and it is generally believed that a peaceful solution of the difficulty will be arrived at.

The Ministry have already been met with a vote of want of confidence, the debate upon which is still proceeding. The motion will probably be defeated by a small majority.

A bill empowering a loan of two millions sterling, for war expenses, has passed both Houses of Parliament, as also an address to her Majesty expressing gratification at the cessation of hostilities in the Transvaal, and the hope is entertained that permanent peace may result.

The first Parliamentary election for some months has taken place at Ondtshoorn, where the Opposition candidate was returned by a large majority.

A public meeting of the citizens of Newcastle, convened by requisition to the Mayor, was held at the Victoria Theatre this evening, on the question of the influx of Chinese into the colony. Mr. Joseph Creer, the Mayor, presided. Mr. George Wallace moved, and Mr. William Grisdale seconded,—"That this meeting views with apprehension the recent landing on our shores of a large number of Chinese, and desires to urge upon the Government the necessity that exists for immediate legislation to prevent any further influx of so undesirable a population." The resolution was ably supported by the members for the city—Messrs. Fletcher and Lloyd, and carried unanimously. Mr. Thomas Brooks moved, and Mr. D. M'Michael seconded, the second resolution, as follows:—"That the chairman sign the foregoing resolution on behalf of the meeting, and, with the mover and seconder, form a deputation to present the same to the honorable the Colonial Secretary." A unanimous vote was also given on this resolution, and after a vote of thanks to Messrs. Lloyd and Fletcher, and a like compliment to the chairman, the proceedings closed. There was a very large attendance, and the proceedings were very orderly.

CENTRAL KEMPSEY.

WEDNESDAY.

A large number of drays and waggons for the Macleay are on route to Armidale with local produce. This traffic bids fair to increase considerably, as the road has been improved. Carriage from Kempsey to Armidale is £6 per ton, or from Sydney, via Kempsey, £6 10s. The time occupied by bullock drays is 10 days, and by horse teams 6 days.

The maize crops are about the average for quantity and quality in this district. Grass is plentiful, and fat bullocks are over supplied for the local market. Beef is retailed at 1½d. and 2d. per lb.

Tenders are invited for several important public works in connection with the Roads Department.

Two lads were fined £5 each yesterday for maiming a horse.

BEGA.

WEDNESDAY.

A considerable increase in the value of land has taken place in this district. On Saturday, Woolumla Flat, the property of Mr. R. L. Tooth, was sold by auction to Mr. Simon Gordon, comprising 870 acres, at £12 5s. per acre. To-day, suburban paddocks, of 15 acres, at Candello, brought £12.

It was finally decided to cordially assist the Central committee in the promotion of the same. The project will receive the hearty support of the whole of the Southern district.

QUEENSLAND.

BRISBANE, WEDNESDAY.

The trans-continental survey party arrived at Point Parker on the 4th May, all well; but next morning five out of six white men forming the party were taken ill with fever. All have since recovered except Cook and Davis, who are very ill. Mr. Watson describes the whole country traversed as easy for railway construction. Nearly all the soil is excellent, with plenty of ballast; but there is a great scarcity of suitable timber, and the flood waters are serious. He intends to inspect the timber in the vicinity of the Gulf, in order to see if it is suitable. Captain Pennefather, of the schooner Pearl, says he is quite sure Point Parker would prove a good seaport. All along the coast there are high sand ridges, and any amount of fresh water. The survey party proceed overland to Normanton, and will meet the Pearl at Kimberley.

Captain M'Dougall, of the Lady Darling (s.), which was wrecked at Mallcolo, and Harwood, first mate, have been cautioned to be more careful in future. The Marine Board have also given their decision in regard to the accident to the Lady Bowen (s.) They consider that Captain Cottier to a certain extent was in error in leaving the bridge while in the river, without a responsible person on the bridge on the look-out. The quarter-master had no business to give up the wheel to anyone during the absence of the master from the bridge. The assistant pilot, who took the wheel, was not on duty on board, and the direct cause of the accident is attributed to the assistant pilot alone. The Board trust that the Government will suitably mark their sense of his conduct, but at the same time they point out that he has been six years in the service, and has hitherto borne an excellent character.

The Governor stayed 12 hours at Mackay, the Government sanctioning the detention of the mail steamer.

Nos. 2 and 3 Queen of the North claims at Maytown have been successfully floated as a company, with a capital of £1500, all of which is local.

At a meeting at Beraleigh on Monday night a resolution was carried, affirming that the time had arrived when a railway should be constructed from the metropolis to the border of the Tweed River district, and also that the chairman should communicate with South Brisbane and other centres of population, desiring them to co-operate in urging the Government to complete the survey and proceed with the construction of the railway.

The Government land sales yesterday at Dalby, Clermont, and Cairns, yielded a total of £27,100.

At a meeting of the shareholders in the Peak Downs Copper mine, held at Copperfield, it was resolved to close the mine at the expiration of Christoe's lease. Pending the sale of the mine, £20,000 reserve.

Favourable reports are to hand from the Nebo goldfield, and a considerable rush has taken place.

VICTORIA.

MELBOURNE, WEDNESDAY.

The Council has finally dealt with the Reform Bill. Sir Charles Sladen gave a resume of the amendments, and hoped they would be found acceptable to the Assembly and the country. Mr. Cuthbert endeavoured to introduce an amendment, that in all reforms of the Constitution an absolute majority of both Chambers should be necessary, but finding the House against him, he withdrew it. The bill was afterwards sent to the Assembly, where, on the motion of Mr. Berry, it will be dealt with on Tuesday. The House then adjourned. There is now hope of a settlement of the question.

In the Assembly to-day, the Chief Secretary declined the appointment of a Commission to inquire into the cause of the decrease in the population of the colony, as shown by the census. He denied that there was any decrease, and said the increase shown was highly satisfactory. It was better to have 850,000 people living here in comfort than to have 950,000 and the streets crowded with unemployed. It was, he said, the machinery for the calculation of the population year by year which was imperfect, and he believed the estimate of the New South Wales census would be found even more erroneous than that of Victoria. Mr. Berry stated, in reply to a question, that he was against taking any steps to divert some of the emigration from Europe to America to the colony; but any steps to facilitate voluntary emigration was a different matter. The Chinese Voters Bill was introduced as a private measure. It met with most strenuous opposition, and no progress was made. Both Houses of Parliament have adjourned till Tuesday.

The Cabinet has accepted the suggestion of the Home Government, that the mail steamers in future should leave at daybreak on Tuesdays.

A meeting of the exhibitors was held to-day, and it was resolved to present some lasting testimonial to Mr. Cosmo Newberry, superintendent of the jury awards.

MAITLAND HANDICAP.

Whirlwind	1
Kanaka	+
Woodlands	+

Cameo, Mecrame, Navy Eights, Dagmar, Godiva, and Barbara Hare also ran. Gaylad bolted for three miles, and was brought back to the paddock.

A very bad start sent Woodlands and Kanaka away in front, and they led on terms till entering the straight, when Whirlwind headed them, and won easily by four lengths from Kanaka and Woodlands, who ran a dead heat for second place. Dagmar was fourth, three lengths away, and then came Godiva, Navy Eights, Cameo, Barbara Hare, and Mecrame. Time, 1 minute 47·6-10 seconds.

NURSERY HANDICAP.

Faust	2
Valentine	3

The other starters were Lochinvar, Hector, Ninus, Twilight, Erin, and Lady Isabel. The start was not a good one. Faust made the running to the distance, when Whirlwind challenged him, and beat him cleverly by half-a-length. Valentine was third, two lengths away; and then followed Lady Isabel and Lochinvar together. After them came Ninus, just clear of the other three. Time, 1 minute 4 seconds.

DUCKENFIELD PARK STAKES.

Vesper	2
Bulgaria	3

The other starters were Sir Solomon, Gleam, Beatrice, and Godiva. The scratchings were Black Swan, Sunset, Volunteer, Lady Clifton, Kingcraft, Cremorne, and Barbara Hare.

Vesper and Beatrice made most of the running, attended by Godiva, but Creswick cut them down. He ran home, and won cleverly by a short length from Vesper, after whom came Bulgaria, Gleam, Beatrice, Godiva, and Sir Solomon. Time, 2 minutes 29 seconds.

NOVEL RACE.

The race was run in the twilight, and the finish was a good one.

FOOTBALL.

The eleventh annual meeting of the Wallaroo club was held at Aarons' Exchange Hotel on Tuesday evening. There was a moderate attendance of members. Mr. M. Arnold occupied the chair. The hon. secretary (Mr. C. B. Boydell) read the following report:—"Your committee in presenting their eleventh annual report have again to congratulate you upon the highly successful result of the past season, and it is with feelings of gratification that they observe the vastly increased popularity of the game, and the large accession of new clubs to the Southern Rugby Football Union. 2. Your club was engaged in eighteen matches during the season of 1880. The 1st Fifteen played thirteen matches; and, although two of these were lost by your team, the return matches in these instances were decided in favour of your representatives, and you have a list of eleven victories to assure you that your club has kept pace with the rapidly increasing improvement discernible in the play of the various leading clubs. On the 12th June, a team from your club visited Newcastle, and, although defeated, they have to record their grateful sense of the hospitality shown to them by the Newcastle club; and your committee express a hope that country matches may form a prominent feature in the proceedings of the coming season. The 2nd Fifteen played only five matches, winning four and losing one. It is a matter for regret that so few matches were played by this team, but a large number have been already arranged for the ensuing winter, and your committee would urge upon its members the desirability of maintaining the efficiency of this important portion of the club. 3. The number of members who paid their subscriptions shows that there has been a slight diminution in the club in this respect. It is the painful duty of your committee to record the melancholy death of Lieutenant Bower, R.N., one of your most active members, and one who was deservedly held in high esteem by the members of the club. 4. At the close of last season the usual ballot for "caps," resulted in the election of Messrs. T. M. Thomson, and J. O. Oxley to that distinction. 5. The cordial thanks of the club are due to his Worship the Mayor, Colonel Roberts, and Captain Strong for their various courtesies to the club during the past season. 6. The honorary Treasurer's statement of accounts for the year shows the club to be in a satisfactory state pecuniarily. 7. In conclusion, your committee express their hope that with the few alterations that have recently been made in the rules of the game, and the prospect of obtaining the Association Cricket ground for playing on, the coming season may be highly satisfactory; and they trust that the members of your club will be ever zealous in the cause of the Southern Rugby Football Union, and thus prove, not alone to football players, but also to the public who take an interest in the game, the immeasurable superiority of that old and national game over all colonial codes that may from time to time spring up, and which must of necessity be abandoned at no distant date, when international football matches take place." The report was unanimously adopted. The following office-bearers were then elected for the ensuing year:—Hon. treasurer, M. Arnold; joint hon. secretaries, C. B. Boydell and G. H. Henriques; committee, J. A. Brodie, W. D. Mair, and H. Douglas; captain, J. A. Brodie; vice-captain, W. D. Mair; delegates to the Union, H. Douglas and T. M. Thomson; scrutineers for caps, C. B. Boydell and G. H. Henriques. On the motion of Mr. Mair, seconded by Mr. Richmond, the cordial thanks of the club were awarded to Mr. R. A. Arnold, who for many years had held the position of captain of the club. A vote of thanks to the chairman closed the proceedings.

It will be observed that a meeting will be held this evening at the Cambridge Club Hotel, to form a new Football Club, under the New South Wales Association rules.

MERCANTILE ROWING CLUB.

The annual regatta, which was fixed for the 24th May, has been postponed to June 4, as the former date was found to be unsuitable. A new programme will be issued for the Saturday afternoon, and the extra races that cannot be rowed then will be put on at other times during the next two or three months.

PROPOSED INTERCOLONIAL YACHT RACES.

A meeting of the committee of the Prince Alfred Yacht Club was held at the Exchange Hotel last night. The chair was occupied by the Commodore, Mr. J. H. Want. The following resolution was moved by Mr. W. J. Trickett, M.L.A., seconded by Mr. V. Brown,—"That the Prince Alfred Yacht Club cordially respond to the invitation of the Royal Sydney Yacht Club to assist in promoting annual intercolonial yachting contests, and that the committee of the P. A. Y. C. confer with the R. S. Y. S. committee, with a view of carrying out the necessary arrangements." The hon. secretary was instructed to communicate with the hon. secretary of the R. S. Y. S., and fix an early date for a meeting of the joint committees.

Our Melbourne correspondent telegraphed yesterday:—"At the Inglewood races, to-day, Maid of Goldsborough ran against a post, and Horton, the jockey, was injured and is in a critical state. At the Warrnambool races, to-day, the weather was unsatisfactory. Maiden Plate: Mirthful bolted, and Spanish Girl won; nine started. Sparkle won the Maiden Steeplechase, and King of Trumps the Hurdle race. Rhea won the Flying Stakes."

Our Adelaide correspondent telegraphed yesterday:—"Trevallyn, Waterford, Euclid, and Strathearn have been scratched for the Birthday Cup."

ART.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—It is a matter of extreme regret amongst art students that no schools have yet been formed in connection with our National Gallery. The students are extremely desirous of availing themselves of the many facilities for study that might be afforded them by the opening of schools, and which, in fact, they were led to believe would be inaugurated. Seven months have elapsed since the students were informed that rules were being framed for their guidance, but up to the present nothing further has been done. Many of the students are debarred from attending during the day, when the Gallery is open, and consequently have to depend on night schools to carry on their studies, and who are, therefore, sufferers to a great extent.

Hoping that the importance of the subject may be some excuse for the length of the letter, I remain, &c.,

INDUSTRIAL AND PROVIDENT SOCIETIES.—A report has been issued by the Chief Registrar of Friendly Societies respecting the Industrial and Provident Societies in England, Wales, Scotland, and Ireland. The tables show that in England there were, at the end of 1879, 898 societies, having 497,803 members; that the sales of goods amounted to £17,618,033; the stock-in-trade at the end of the year was £2,458,087; the balance of profit amounted to £1,673,027; and the share capital, £5,325,119. In Wales there were 49 societies, with 5004 members; sale transactions, £164,861; stock-in-trade, £22,932; the profit was £14,298; and the share capital, £39,864. In Scotland there were 232 societies, having 68,067 members; the sales amounted to £2,549,565; stock-in-trade, £370,510; balance of profit, £258,152; and share capital, £373,728. In Ireland there were 6 societies, with 537 members; sales in 1879, £17,170; profits, £1482; and share capital, £7615.

MESSRS. HARDIE AND GORMAN beg to draw special attention to their land sales of next Saturday, at 3 o'clock, at the South Chesterfield, Waverley, and at the Coogee Hill Estate. Free tickets and lithographs are procurable at their Rooms, Bell's-chambers, Pitt-street. Grand views are obtained from these estates of the Pacific Ocean and the suburbs.—ADV.

AMUSEMENTS.

THEATRES, &c.

There was no change of programme at any of the theatres last night. At the Theatre Royal "Pinafore" was given, and will be repeated to-night and to-morrow night. Then on Saturday evening "Struck Oil" will be revived for five nights only. Miss Maggie Moore will, of course, be Lizzie Stofel, Mr. Williamson will be John Stofel, and the other principal characters will be assumed by Mrs. George Gordon, Mr. E. Shepherd, Mr. Beverly, Mr. Rainford, and Mr. St. Lawrence. The drama will, it is said, be put on the stage in a style surpassing any that has hitherto been shown here. At the Gaiety Theatre the last nights of "Maritana" are announced, although, seeing that the house is crowded nightly, there seems to be little occasion for change. Still the Montague-Turner Company have as yet played only two operas, and as their season cannot extend beyond nine weeks, and they have already announced "Trovatore," "Faust," "Martha," and "Mignon" (the last-named being new here), they have determined to take "Maritana" off. "Trovatore" will be produced on Monday night, and this evening Miss Eva Davenport, who, it may be remembered, was the Josephine in the first performance of "Pinafore" given in Australia, will play Maritana. Miss Montague, who needs this short rest, will resume the part to-morrow night and on Saturday night. "The Overland Route" is being played at the Queen's Theatre, and on Friday night Mr. Hoskins, who is in the cast, will take a benefit. At the Opera House, the Mastodon Minstrels are playing a number of absurdities, which thoroughly succeed in their object—that of creating laughter. Professor Anderson is still at the School of Arts, but he advertises that his unusually lengthy season is about to close.

THE CIRCUS.

O'Neil's United American Circus has been pitched at the Haymarket reserve, and the usual nightly performance and Saturday matinée are advertised. The members of the company are above the average in talent, and the cosy little marquee in which they perform has hitherto been liberally patronised. The most daring of the riders is Robbins (formerly of Chiarini's Circus), whose feats are both daring and graceful, although Perry, in his "voltigeur" act, almost rivals him. Brame revives the old but amusing joke of the countryman's visit to the circus, where an apparently intoxicated spectator insists upon riding a performing horse, and after throwing off an extraordinary number of clothes appears in the dress, and displays the skill of a trained equestrian. The horizontal bar exercises of West, Hodge, and Barnard are good. The little Permans dance very neatly; and the clowns are Barnard and the well-known Johnny Cowan.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The recent announcements in your paper of the intended demise, by the City Corporation to the Agricultural Society, of 25 acres of land, portion of Moore Park, for the purpose of holding exhibitions of live stock, having led me to visit the locality, I have traced the fall of the land, and for a great distance the run of water into the water reserve. I returned from my inspection with the impression that the same august body which in former days expended large sums of money in the acquisition of lands for the purpose of preventing contamination of the city water supply would not, with the facts before them, have fallen into so grave an error as is involved in the recent arrangement.

I have not much time to devote to the ransacking of the archives of the Municipal Council, but I find that large portions of land have been acquired from the Lord Estates, at a cost exceeding £19,000, for the purpose, not of storage of water, but of preventing the pollution of water, and that so lately as on the 20th of August, 1875, five acres two roods and twenty-two perches were resumed from Mr. Want at a cost of £875, besides expenses, as being part of the water reserve, which, heretofore, had been sold by an impecunious Administration against many remonstrances; and with this information I addressed myself to the consideration of your report of the proceedings of the Sydney Municipal Council, published in the Herald of the 4th instant, from which I gather that, with one dissentient voice, it was resolved to deliver the water supply of the city over to the "proper precautions" with which the Engineer thought the "contamination was not likely to occur, except, perhaps, in the case of thunderstorms washing everything before them." It is not too much to assume that, in the Engineer's opinion, contamination would follow such thunderstorms, and that it would at other times also be likely to take place, unless "proper precautions" were taken.

I commend this matter to the very grave consideration of the citizens, who seem to be about to be delivered over to the conditions of a probable or possible contamination, at all times, unless proper precautions are properly taken, with a vigilance that shall never slumber; and of an inevitable contamination whenever a thunderstorm, or, I presume, any other storm of water, shall "wash everything before it." I submit that the water supply should have nothing to fear, everything to hope, from thunderstorms, and that our guardians should not voluntarily, and without any obligation whatever, jeopardise the purity of our water system by placing it in dependence at all times upon the observance of "proper precautions."

It would seem that not any analogy serves to guide our guardians. We adopted sewerage into the harbour after London had abandoned sewerage into the Thames (we must try the experiment ourselves). We are now going to try the effect of washing the excreta of cattle and horses into our reservoirs, after it has been tried in the Yan Yean, where pollution is so marked that the flavour can be detected in the bread made with its waters.

I have heard that with the present rate of progress we shall have our new water supply in thirty years, and enquire whether the citizens are prepared, during the interval, to drink the washing of the Augean stable, proposed for their acceptance. I have, &c.,

BURTON BRADLEY.

Llewellyn, Five Dock, May 9.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The comfort of travelling to Coogee Bay by tramcar attracted my wife and myself this hot afternoon, thinking to enjoy the fresh sea breeze, but we were disappointed in a most unexpected manner. A long time ago we had read in your columns of premises having been built at the Abatoirs for consuming the offal from killed cattle, and we thought that anything like a pestilence along the coast from slaughter-yard refuse being washed up was a thing of the past. Judge of our astonishment when walking immediately on to the Coogee beach at experiencing an offensive effluvia, equalled only by close proximity to a passing night-cart. On looking about for a cause I counted twenty-five separate heaps of what appeared to be bullocks' liver and lights, together with windpipes, &c., attached, all within a space of eighteen paces along the beach, by ten paces wide. In other directions, look where I would, black heaps of putrefying matter met the view, and dozens of children were running in and out of the water within a few yards of all this pestilential matter. I need hardly say that a fly alighting on a child with a sore lip or arm, after leaving such fetid accumulations, would certainly endanger life. The responsibility lies with the chiefs of our community, the present Government. I am, &c.,

Received. From J. C. Smith, asking for the use of the hall for the purpose of a skating rink, &c. It was agreed that the use of the hall be granted upon payment of 10s per night, &c. The Treasurer reported that he had banked £48 0s. 6d. since the Council last met, and that £529 0s. 3d., Government endowment upon last year's rates, would shortly be placed to the credit of the borough. Alderman Farr moved,—"That the overseer of roads' wages be increased to 10s. per day." Seconded by Alderman Martin, and carried. Alderman Pfoeffer moved,—"That tenders be called for fencing the tramroad through Mr. McGee's paddock." Seconded by Alderman Farr, and carried. The Council then went into committee to consider tenders for fencing, and having decided upon the successful tenderer, resumed its sitting. The Mayor reported, and the following resolution was agreed to, viz.:—"That the tender of G. T. Smith at 7s. 9d. per rod be accepted."—L. J. PARK, Council Clerk.

"SULPHOLINE LOTION."—An External Means of CURING SKIN DISEASES. There is scarcely any eruption but will yield to "Sulpholine" in a few days, and commence to fade away, even if it seems past cure. Ordinary pimples, redness, blotches, scurf, roughness, vanish as if by magic; whilst old, enduring skin disorders, that have plagued the sufferers for years, however deeply rooted they may be, "Sulpholine" will successfully attack them. It destroys the animalculæ which cause these unsightly, irritable, painful affections, and always produces a clear, healthy, natural condition of the skin. "Sulpholine" Lotion is sold by most Chemists. Bottles, 2s 9d.

OUR MELBOURNE LETTER.

MELBOURNE, May 9.

Everybody, of course, wants to know what has become of the seventy thousand people who are missing from the census, and upon whom we had calculated? We had begun to speak of the population of Victoria as a million, at least, and to look forward to being able, by the next census, to reckon it by millions; and now it is found that we have only a paltry 855,796, and that it may take more than another ten years to reach our coveted six ciphers. This discovery takes the conceit out of us. We have been producing population for the benefit of other colonies, and, as compared with what we have done before in the way of population, we have gone backward. As a matter of course, the party to whose rash counsels we are indebted for this retrogression is attempting to show that we ought to rejoice rather than mourn at this loss of numbers; for, that they, being gone, those who remain have the more to share among themselves. We have, therefore, according to this reasoning, only to go on reducing our numbers in order to increase our prosperity, and when it comes to the last man we shall be perfectly prosperous. And it seems, too, that we are all clustering to Melbourne, which now contains more than a third of the people in the colony. And truly it is an enormous place. I looked at it the other day, for the first time, from the dome of the Exhibition, and I was amazed at its extent, stretching as far as vision could discover in all directions. And it looked beautiful, too. I remember, just twenty-seven years ago, contemplating the Melbourne of that period from a tolerably high house, and its effect upon the mind then was depressing. For it showed only a dull level of brick and corrugated iron, with hardly a green thing to vary the blankness. There were very few public buildings then, and the only two church towers were those of St. James' and St. Peter's, both of them as ugly as architectural crudity could design them. The one tree to be seen was a primeval gumtree, which grew and flourished, but now is dying and decaying in the yard of St. Francis's, itself a very nightmare of ecclesiastical hideousness. But now the view of Melbourne from a lofty height is singularly agreeable in its variety of form and colour. I am one of those sceptics who never could see the beauty of Melbourne, looked at on firm ground; but, as viewed from the dome of the Exhibition, it is unquestionably picturesque. I suppose it is only another verification of the truth that distance does lend some enchantment to the view. But if Melbourne is to go on growing at the disproportionate rate it has been growing since our Protection tariff called into existence so many exotic manufactures, it will, in no very long period, absorb the country, and there will no longer be Victoria, but only Melbourne. I am bound to say that, in proportion to its increase, it becomes unbearable as a place to live in, and I can well believe that the 70,000 who have left us have fled in dismay at the prospect of having to pass their lives in such a city. I am aware that this depreciation is of the kind that a certain class term "unpatriotic." I can but reply that it is true. For there is such a growing offensiveness of manner in the "people," that one's life has to be passed in a perpetual fret. I have more than once remarked upon the savagery of the younger element in Victoria, and every day goes to confirm what I have said. Only on Friday last, for example, a Collingwood youth stabbed his father in the head, because, having suffered a good deal of violence from his son, the father had threatened to bring him before the magistrate. And this is very far from being a solitary example of the uncontrolled diabolism of our youth. It is true that the total absence of filial respect is the direct consequence of parental neglect of duty; but the fact is none the less unquestionable that, as a rule, the young men and women of Melbourne are utterly unpossessed of any sort of veneration for their elders, and moreover they are quite lacking in self-control.

One would think, therefore, that instead of spending many days and shedding much ink in disquisitions upon doctrine and ceremonial, our clergy would find their account more profitably in mending the manners, and therefore the morals, of the people. But when they are counselled to endeavour to do good in this way, their only reply is that neither manners nor morals can effect reform if religion be wanting; and as they continue to teach religion in the old routine way, namely, by preaching sermons which those who need reform do not go to hear, it is pretty certain that even if we admit clergymen to be right in principle, they are quite mistaken as to method. Meantime, the fighting about doctrine and ceremonial goes on. The Presbytery have discharged their prisoner with a caution; but some of its members are writing long letters to the papers on points of belief. The Ritualists, too, are likewise relieving their feelings by denouncing their opponents. It seems to me, that among many other things for which we have to thank newspapers, is the opportunity they offer for this letting out of theological explosive material. In olden times, they burned one another by way of argument; but now they only denounce one another in the papers. This latter is of course much the better way, both because it does nobody any harm, and it amuses outsiders. And in connection with this Ritualistic fray, the Rev. J. H. Gregory, the incumbent of All Saints', has just returned from England, and, the other night, he met his friends at a welcome gathering and expressed his approval of what had been done in his absence. Therefore the Rev. Mr. Spicer is happy, and his enemies are declared to be confounded; and so we may expect to see the services at All Saint's more magnificent than ever.

It has been suggested that a sort of moral health society might advantageously be started; the term moral, in this case, to mean what its etymological significance implies, namely, manners. The half-yearly meeting of the Health Society on Friday night has revived this notion, more especially as the society seems to have gravitated into a somewhat routine condition of existence, contenting itself with an occasional meeting to hear a dull paper read, and to deliver health tracts. It was thought, at first, that by the inclusion of ladies in the committee, the usefulness of the society would be extended, but this result does not seem to have been accomplished. My own experience of ladies' committees is that they do the business of an institution less efficiently than men's committees. There is a great deal of conversation in such committees, but not much work; and, as a matter of course, their illogical habits quite prevent them reasoning out any matter upon which there is a difference of opinion. Besides, ladies' committees are dealt with too indulgently. I have reason to know, for example, that in the committees of the Lying-in Hospital and the Children's Hospital, of this city—the proceedings of which are never reported in the newspapers—there are discussions which would occasion remarks of a most uncomplimentary kind to the managing bodies of these charities if they were reported. I am not at all surprised, therefore, to learn that the Health Society has been weakened rather than strengthened by the female element in its committee. For all that, if the right sort of women could be found, they might do rare service in carrying out the purposes of such a moral Health Society as has been suggested.

Germane to this matter of moral health, just now, is the question of Sunday trains, which was brought up in the Assembly the other night by Mr. Woods. Considering the extremely low morale of the Chamber, it is quite diverting to read the indignation some of the members expressed at the proposition to run trains on the longer lines, meaning the country lines, on a Sunday. There was no argument in the indignation, nothing but cant; but the indignation was all the louder in consequence. Mr. Woods's method in bringing the matter before the House was the argumentum ad absurdum, or to describe it by a still more homely method, he insisted that what was sauce for the goose could not but be the correct dressing for the gander, and that if it was proper to close the country lines on a Sunday, it was nothing but right to close the metropolitan lines on that day. Mr. Woods is not an adroit man, and so he spoilt his case; but everybody who is inclined to take a dispassionate view of this subject of Sunday travelling feels that he was right. Mr. Paterson, the Minister for Railways, made no secret of his wish to open the lines on Sundays. He incidentally revealed the relations existing between himself and his colleagues, and so set forth prophetically what a good many people say is going to happen—namely, an alliance between the Paterson section of the Government side and the Opposition. The probability of such an alliance has been re-asserted during the week in connection with the Reform question. It is confidently declared that the calmly deliberate consideration given by the Council to the Assembly's bill, and the very reasonable alterations made in it, have secured the approval of all the reasonable members on the Government side, and that there is more than a probability of the question being brought to an end. The widening breach between the now clearly distinct parties on the Government side gives a further warrant for this belief. Nothing, for instance, can exceed the bitterness of the quarrels between Sir Bryan O'Loghlen and the Attorney-General. They fight as if there had been a life-long vendetta between them. And truly there could be nothing in common with two such men. For while the one is all impulse, and thoroughly genial at heart, the other is so saturated with his own venom that he cannot help exhaling poison, no matter how he may try. But as a matter of fact, he does not try. He is thus a terror to his friends, who never know into what fresh difficulty he is going to lead them; and he is a perpetual target to his enemies, who have no difficulty in finding out where his vulnerable parts are, for he is vulnerable all over. His colleagues would gladly be rid of him, only they know if he were not of them, he would be against them. It seems always a pity he is a teetotaller: he does not recommend his principles, and one cannot help wishing that he would break his pledge some day, just that one might discover whether his bad manners are due to ill-nature or ill-temper.

And in the matter of ill-temper, the predictions of what Mr. Lalor would do, after awhile, as Speaker, are beginning to be verified. As a matter of course, he is not so unwise as to snub his creators; but his natural petulance finds an outlet in reprimanding those whom his creators do not love. He has foresight to discover that he will never have another such sunny season as now, and so he makes his hay accordingly.

And, talking of hay-making, the thieves at the Exhibition are having their good time now. Up to the end of April the detectives were stationed at the doors to keep out the thieves; and so well did they keep out the regular thieves that there was not much thieving done, and what was done was the work of the attendants and of visitors not in the profession of thieving; but the Exhibition having closed, albeit its doors are still open to anybody who can raise a shilling, it is not considered necessary to interpose the detective filter—consequently the good time of those who live by that sort of industry, whose practitioners have been playfully termed "knights," has now come. As things have turned out, they may not have occasion to regret having been kept out of the exercise of their vocation until now, for, in the process of removal of the exhibits, things are a good deal at sixes and sevens. At tables where at first the public were requested "not to touch" now they are invited to inspect, with the object of being induced to purchase; and, in this way, a good many articles pass by the process of legerdemain which would not pass if the prestidigitators had not first been passed at the doors.

Consistently with this bad management, the devastation of the Gardens has begun. After a quarter of a century of desolation, the Gardens were, eighteen months ago, rendered not unlovely to the eye. But now that they really merit the name of gardens, and do not provoke the reproach of "desert," the old supervision is going to be restored. A gardener is re-appointed who admits he is no gardener; and the real gardener, who made the wilderness to blossom, is to be dismissed. Nobody can well explain how or why this is to come about; it is one of those mysteries at which you can guess, but which you cannot penetrate. And the great Exhibition is to be finished by a concert and a ball, the proceeds of the ball to be given to the charities. This is all well enough; but in order to make the affair a profitable one there is to be no supper, but only, as a Commissioner informed me, a light refection, buns and ginger-beer, for example. As the sons of the Prince of Wales will be invited, this unstimulating repast will, it is thought, give the young gentlemen a good opinion of our moderation, and will correct in their minds any erroneous impressions they may have formed of our habits, such opinions, for example, as the letters of Mr. Arthur Sketchley may have encouraged.

As an agreeable set-off to this ginger-beer carousing, Mr. L. L. Smith has been submitting some samples of his Victorian-made champagne to a small party of experts. I am not a wine expert, and I was not one of the champagne party; but I am told by a gentleman, who says he is able to judge, that the wine is a great deal better than a good deal of imported champagne, and that it ought certainly to displace the bulk of what comes from Europe. So we all wish Mr. Smith success in his new enterprise.

The health committee of the City Council have brought up their report of the sanitary voyage they made down the Yarra. It is a very ornate document, full of flowers of speech. The hand of the Town Clerk is unmistakable in its diction. It sets forth in rosy-tinted language the delights of a pellucid river, and denounces with much energy the wickedness of those who allow nasty drains to run into it. It ought to convince the Government and the Legislature of the necessity of legislating upon the subject at once.

The poem of the voyage of the Ferret is not yet finished. There are many cantos yet to be sung. The latest canto, a short one, was the bringing of the owner (Henderson) before the magistrates on Saturday. The interview was brief, and we have to wait another week for a further continuance of it. Meantime Henderson has been seen, and, as the phrase is, interviewed; but the interviewers did not get much out of the interview. Henderson knows how to hold his tongue, probably in several languages. And his wife is an interesting person too. She speaks freely of what happened during the voyage—that is, what happened so far as she was concerned, but her interesting narrations do not illuminate the subject. She gets more out of her interrogators than they do out of her. It is a sore disappointment to the curious public that they cannot get on board the vessel. It was surrounded by boats yesterday, but the curious people got no further than the outside. So they all wished they had been educated as detective police, and then they would have gone on board with authority.

In like manner many people have wanted to see Colley and his victim, and then they have wished they were surgeons so that they might be allowed into the ward on scientific grounds. He will, probably, recover; she will with equal probability die. He cut much harder and deeper when he tried to murder her, than when he attempted to kill himself. Her name is not Lewis, but Mitchell, as she was, it appears, certainly married in Sydney to a most respectable gentleman of that name. She never had the right to call herself Nightingale.

Mrs. Mary Jones, the other heroine who has been posing before the world in connection with the Glenrowan affair, having been acquitted by a jury of her countrymen on the charge of harbouring the Kellys, is now going to sue the Government for the loss of her hotel.

The Torpedo Board have investigated the torpedo disaster, and they report that they know no more now than they did at the beginning of the investigation; for which report one cannot be too thankful, for if they had come to any conclusion a number of persons would have questioned it, and we should have had another newspaper controversy. Perhaps they foresaw this calamity and so avoided the evil. Therefore, they are a wise Board.

Mr. Cumming has been elected for the Western Province. Nobody is either glad or sorry.

SOLDIERS' GRAVES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—A very short time since, I visited one of my old haunts, namely, the grave-place of soldiers who died at Blackheath, on the old Bathurst road (just opposite Hydora House), and was shocked to see all the tombstones—some dozen—going to destruction, unprotected by fence or wall, and used by cattle for scratching-posts.

It is certainly the business of someone to prevent further desecration, either the Bishop, or the Commander-in-Chief of our military, or Mr. Lackey, or Mr. Hoskins, or the Minister of Education, and perhaps the Postmaster-General.

Many pounds have been expended in making a road to Govett's Leap, not far off, and if a fence is not soon put up at the end of Govett-street, some tombstones will soon be wanted for horses and buggies going over full of young ladies. That would be deplorable now they are so scarce.

I remain, &c., R. C. RODD.

R. M. S. dock, May 8.

This is one of the inscriptions:—"Sacred to the memory of Edward Manley, who departed this life on the 24th March, 1842, having been accidentally killed at Mount Victoria. This stone was erected by the detachment 99th Regiment stationed at Blackheath, from which corps his father had lately been discharged;"—and so on with five or six others, one stating "it was erected by his comrades of the 4th Regiment, in token of their regard and esteem."

LAW REPORT.

SUPREME COURT.—WEDNESDAY, MAY 11.

Banco Court.—(Before Sir WILLIAM MANNING and a jury of four.)

MOORE AND ANOTHER V. HAYNES AND OTHERS.

Mr. Darley, Q.C., and Mr. Manning, instructed by Mr. Heron, appeared for the plaintiffs; Mr. Salomons, Q.C., and Mr. Pilcher, instructed by Messrs. Slattery and Heydon, appeared for the defendants.

Joseph Haynes: Am employed in the Colonial Architect's office; was at Clontarf on Boxing Day; between 1 and 2 o'clock was in the pavilion; the greater portion of the young people were intoxicated more or less; the dancing was of an immoral character; I saw indecent gestures; I heard very bad language; there were children from 8 years of age and upwards present; a dispute occurred between two girls, and the language was of a most filthy description; shortly afterwards I saw a woman and two men; the woman was wanting to go with one of the men; she was drunk; the other man tried to interfere; the language was very abusive; a number of children were close by; I saw a woman who was very drunk walking between two men; she was leaning on their arms; they went into the bush with her; one man let her down and indecently assaulted her; I saw a man kick a woman; I did not interfere; my brother was with me. [His HONOR the Judge remarked that to his mind it was perfectly awful to think that a man could stand by and witness a woman assaulted by a man without putting a stop to it.]

Cross-examined by Mr. Darley, Q.C.: The drunken woman I spoke of came from the bar; I was about thirty or forty yards distant when the indecent assault took place. [The witness was here examined strictly, and at great length, as to the relative position of the parties and the particulars of the assault.] There were four larrikins present; I watched the dancing in the pavilion; the gestures were very indecent. [The witness was severely cross-examined as to the nature of the gestures, which is altogether unfit for publication.] I am not a coward; on two different occasions I have saved life at the risk of my own life; I swore yesterday that before the woman was indecently assaulted the men "forced" her down; they did not use violence, they "put" her down; I did not mean that they committed rape upon her. [His HONOR the Judge commented strongly upon any man standing by seeing what looked very like rape being committed and neither interfering nor calling for police assistance.]

William Hayes, warehouseman: I was at Clontarf last Boxing Day, from 11 to nearly 3 o'clock; when I was there I saw a fight between two men in the pavilion; the majority of the people were larrikins; the girls were very rowdy; there were a good many people intoxicated; I heard a good deal of improper languuage, both from men and women; there was a great deal of indecent language; a great many of the women present appeared to belong to the prostitute class. To his Honor: I did not see the police interfere.

Thomas M'Guire was here called. Mr. Salomons, Q.C., informed the Court that this witness was called to substantiate the truth of the paragraph in the Herald, October 12, 1881. On the objection of Mr. Darley, Q.C., his Honor refused to receive it.

John M'Guire, butcher at the Coffee Tavern: I was engaged last Boxing Day by Messrs. Moore, the plaintiffs; I was at Clontarf from 10 to 6 o'clock; I was looking after the luncheon-room; I was at the bars for drinks; some of the people were not respectable; the majority of those present were not respectable; I saw three girls fighting in the pavilion; they were intoxicated; they were about eighteen years of age; I saw also a fight between two young men; at each of these fights there were a great many people making a ring, and encouraging them.

Patrick Murphy, blacksmith: Was at Clontarf on Boxing Day; I went into the pavilion to have a dance with a lady friend of mine; what was taking place in the pavilion was of such a character that I would not take a woman in; there was much improper language; the language was obscene and very foul; I saw a young fellow playing with a lady's drawers on; the majority of the people were not respectable.

Ayroll Burnes: Was at Clontarf on Boxing Day; from what I saw I should say that the majority of the people there were prostitutes and larrikins; some of them were under the influence of liquor; there was much bad language; the conduct in the pavilion was very rowdy; there were nothing like enough police present to keep order; there were several fights; they danced casino; the language I heard was obscene and indecent; there was a great deal of fighting all over the grounds; I saw a girl pull off her drawers in the middle of the grounds, and throw them to a young man; I had lunch in my boat, and I saw very indecent conduct; a young man and a young woman were together (the witness was here examined as to particulars); I was more than a hundred yards away; what I saw could not have been seen from the pavilion; I saw some young men bathing; there were girls on the shore looking at them. [This witness was cross-examined at length by Mr. Darley, Q.C., as to the times and particulars of the circumstances described in his examination in chief, without having his evidence shaken in any material particular.]

The case was then adjourned till the following morning.

Jury Court.—(Before Sir JAMES MARTIN, C.J., and a jury of four).

DENGATE V. MILLS.

This case was ordered to stand over until Monday, on which day it is to stand first on the list.

WAKFORD V. COMMISSIONER OF RAILWAYS.

Mr. Darley, Q.C., and Mr. Manning, instructed by Messrs. Gannon and M'Laughlin, appeared for the plaintiff; Mr. Salomons, Q.C., and Mr. C. B. Stephen, instructed by the Crown Solicitor) appeared for the nominal defendant.

This was an action against the Government for breach of contract. In January, 1880, the plaintiff contracted with the Commissioner of Railways to make trial borings for obtaining water on the extensions from Junee to Narrandera, and from Wagga to Albury. The contract contained this clause:—"There will not be less than four trial borings to be made, two on the extension from Wagga to Albury and two on the extension from Junee to Narrandera." There was no express obligation on the Commissioner to order the borings below any minimum depth, though there was a sentence to the following effect:—"It is not intended to carry out boring to a depth exceeding 200 feet," and providing a schedule of prices for such further depth. In fact, the plaintiff made eight trial borings between Wagga and Albury, and for this he was paid, but the Commissioner refused to allow him to make any borings between Junee and Narrandera. This was the breach for which he brought his action.

The jury having been addressed by counsel,

The CHIEF JUSTICE said, in effect, that there must be a verdict for the plaintiff. The agreement was that there should be not less than two trial borings on the extension from Junee to Narrandera. The Government, in refusing this, certainly broke the contract. At the same time the damages must be nominal, since there was no stipulation as to minimum depth. If the plaintiff had been stopped and only bored a foot, the contract would have been kept, and yet he would have made no profit. His Honor directed the jury to assess the damages they would find in case the full Court should hold that the plaintiff was entitled on the contract to bore to a reasonable depth.

The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff, and assessed the damages at £350. Leave was reserved for the defendant to move to make the damages nominal. His Honor certified for costs.

Equity Court.

His Honor the Primary Judge in Equity, for the convenience of the profession, indicated the course that ought to be pursued in settling issues for trying questions of fact under rule 13 of the new rules, established under the Equity Act of 1880. Only the issues material to the relief prayed should be first drawn up, and should not extend to details of facts merely evidential, such as whether an act was done on the 14th of May, when any day in May would do. The issues should be as few as would be consistent with the actual statement on the record of the question in dispute between the parties. A clause, or perhaps an issue, should be added, stating in general words that all other details and documents material to the relief prayed are put in issue. The plaintiff's solicitor should first draw up the issues he wishes to be decided. He should then take it to the defendant's solicitor, who would add such issues, or propose such alterations in these issues as he should think necessary for the defendant. Finally the proposed issues, drawn up on one paper, should be brought before the Primary Judge, on summons, in chambers, to be settled. At such settlement the Judge would fix a day for the hearing. The Judge said that, perhaps, there would hereafter be a regulation on this subject if required.

METROPOLITAN DISTRICT COURT.

WEDNESDAY.

(Before Mr. District Court Judge DOWLING.)

WOLFE V. ROBERTSON.

To recover £30, work and labour done. Mr. Murdoch for the plaintiff and Mr. Castle for the defence. The defence was "never indebted," and that the plaintiff entered into partnership with the defendant to carry on a certain contract at Onion Point, and that the alleged work done was done on the said contract, which is at present unfinished, and the said partnership has not terminated. The plaintiff was nonsuited.

MURDOCH V. FARRELLY.

To recover £100 on a promissory note. Mr. Simpson, instructed by Mr. Gray, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Rogers, instructed by Messrs. Want, Johnson, and Scarvell, for the defendant. The defence was that the note was given in consideration of certain services to be performed for the defendant by the plaintiff, and that these were never rendered. Verdict for the defendant.

SMITH V. SIMPSON.

To recover £200 on a promissory note. Mr. Want, instructed by Mr. Murdoch, for the plaintiff; and Mr. Rogers, instructed by Mr. Carroll, for the defence.

The evidence was that the plaintiff Smith obtained from his partner Merritt a bill for £200, purporting to be drawn by Simpson. Merritt owed Smith £150, and the agreement was that when the amount of the bill was collected, Smith should pay Merritt the extra amount above the debt. Smith sued Simpson for £200. The defence was that Smith had given no value for the bill. Verdict for the defendant.

The Court then adjourned until 10 a.m. to-day.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.—WEDNESDAY.

(Before his Honor Mr. Justice WINDEYER).

The sittings of the Central Criminal Court were resumed at the Darlinghurst Court-house, the Attorney-General (Hon. R. Wisdom, Q.C.), and Mr. Irving, prosecuting on behalf of the Crown.

JURORS FINED.

The following jurors were fined £5 each for non-attendance:—William Joseph Weston, Phillip-street; Arthur Walker, Hunter's Hill; Jabez William Small, Newtown-street; Richard Glinn Vallack, Enfield.

PRISONER SENTENCED.

Otto Herman, convicted on the previous day of unlawfully wounding his wife, was sentenced to six months' hard labour in Darlinghurst gaol.

INSANITY OF A PRISONER.

Robert Williams, against whom an indictment had been filed for the murder of William Freeman, at Agnes Bank, on February 22, was brought to the bar to be examined as to his sanity or otherwise. Drs. O'Connor and Markey were called, and gave evidence to the effect that they had examined the prisoner, and found him to be insane. A jury, empanelled for the occasion, decided that he was insane, and he was ordered to be confined during his Excellency's pleasure.

CRIMINAL ASSAULT.

Henry William Brown, a man of about 45 years of age, was arraigned upon a charge of criminally assaulting a little girl, 11 years of age, named Mary Elizabeth Wirth, with intent to commit a rape at Sydney on December 31, 1880. The prisoner, who pleaded not guilty, was defended by Mr. Buchanan (instructed by Mr. W. Roberts, jun.) The evidence taken was very voluminous, and was of a most disgusting nature, such as to be totally unfit for publication. After the circumstances attending the commission of the offence had been described evidence was given to show that since the alleged commission of the offence, the child had been an inhabitant of the Sydney Infirmary for some weeks, and that she was at the present time an out-patient under treatment for a disease with which it was shown that the prisoner was at the time afflicted. The jury, after a retirement of about five minutes, returned a verdict of guilty.

The prisoner, in answer to the usual question as to whether he had anything to say why sentence should not be passed, said that he had not been fairly treated, as he had eight or nine witnesses who had not been examined. He had had these witnesses summoned, but they had not been called, and the same had been the case at the police court. This was the third time the girls had been examined, and every time they had made a different statement, and yet it had been allowed to go to the jury. Mr. Irving well knew that this had been the case, but he had done everything he could to prevent justice being done to him, and the same was the case with sergeant Higgins. He could bring proof of this, and that the sergeant had put words into the girls' mouths, and told them what to say. He was as innocent of the charge as the judge himself. He had witnesses to prove that he was at home when it was said the offence was committed; still he must suffer. This was an English court of law, but the innocent must suffer for the guilty.

Mr. Roberts, in the absence of counsel, asked that he might be allowed to contradict one statement of the prisoner's. Every witness with two exceptions—one of whom was ill in the country, and the other was at sea—who had been summoned had been called. One had not answered to his name when called, but every other witness had been examined.

His HONOR: You have been convicted of an abominable offence upon the clearest testimony; but not content with the outrage upon these little girls, you attempt to perpetrate a further outrage upon the counsel who has so ably defended you, and have insulted the jury by attempting to cast in their teeth the imputation that they have convicted an innocent man. You are a bad man. Everything has been done in this case by your counsel that could be done. I have read the depositions taken at the first inquiry before the magistrates, and having done so, I cannot understand how they ever came to the conclusion to discharge you. The girls have made no contradiction, and Mr. Buchanan is far too able a counsel not to have put the depositions in and shown them to the jury if there had been any contradiction; but they have told throughout the plain unvarnished tale we have heard to-day free of all contradictions. It is base and ungrateful of you to attempt to accuse your counsel of what you have stated. The learned counsel went every length to which it was right for a counsel to go in order to get you off. The evidence was such that he could do nothing else but abuse the witnesses. Yet though he had done what he could, you turn round and vilify him and the solicitor who has ably seconded your defence. But this is a small matter compared with the enormity of your offence. You have done that which every father of a family would rather see his children dead before his eyes than endure. You have not only polluted their bodies with this wretched loathsome disease, but we do not know what you may have done in polluting their minds by initiating them thus early into these mischievous mysteries. Can we wonder that we have juvenile prostitutes and young larrikins about when we have men like you going about ruining their bodies and their souls? It is an abominable offence, striking at the morality of the whole of our infant community. Unfortunately, you cannot be punished as you deserve for this offence. Under the English law the punishment was ten years' transportation, but by some legislation of an extraordinary character the law only allows me to pass a sentence of three years' hard labour in one of our gaols. I hope the time will come before long when we shall have the proper punishment for an offence of this kind, and that is flogging. I only regret that the law does not allow me to inflict this penalty now. Here are two little children brought up decently and respectably, and because they are playing about they are to be held up as prostitutes and perjurers at your suggestion. Had you been put on your trial for ravishing this child, you might have died for your offence, and very properly so. As far as the law allows me I will punish you. The sentence of the Court is that you be imprisoned, with hard labour, for three years in Darlinghurst gaol.

Mr. Buchanan: "May I assure your Honor that every witness of whom I was instructed was called."

His Honor: "I am sure of it, Mr. Buchanan."

The Court then adjourned till next day.

An inquest was held by Mr. H. Shiell, J.P. (City Coroner), yesterday, with respect to the death of Ah Cheir, a Chinaman, who died suddenly on Tuesday morning, at his residence, near the toll-bar, Alexandria. Deceased was 27 years of age, and a native of Canton. He arrived in Sydney about a month ago by the Menmuir (s.) Recently he had complained of being unwell. A post-mortem examination was made by Dr. Egan, who found that death arose from inflammation of the intestines. A verdict to the effect that death was the result of natural causes was returned.

POLICE.

CENTRAL POLICE COURT.

Yesterday, Curwen Gale, a respectably dressed man, about 25 years of age, was charged, on remand, before Messrs. Booth and Solomon, with having forged the signature of Beale and Co., of Sydney, to a money order for £1 10s., and uttered the same. Detective J. Camphin conducted the prosecution, and Mr. Murdoch appeared for the prisoner. Camphin arrested prisoner in a house at North Shore, where he denied the charge. Charles H. Haigh, residing at Merrylands, near Parramatta, purchased goods from Beale and Co.'s, in February, on which he was to pay deposits; he made the last payment for £1 10s., by means of a money order, payable to the firm. William Burnett, teller in a branch of the Money Order Office, produced the advice for the order which was issued to Haigh on April 30; the prisoner presented the order to him on May 2, and he cashed it, believing the prisoner to have been commissioned to get it paid. P. C. Beale, sole member of the firm of Beale and Co., said prisoner had been in his employ as bookkeeper up to the 6th instant; the signature attached to the order was not his writing, but appeared to be prisoner's; he did not authorise prisoner to write it; the firm customarily paid money orders into the Bank of New Zealand, George-street, to be collected; the prisoner admitted to the prosecutor that he had taken the order, and said he thought he could find it again. Francis Beale, who conducted the business of the firm in the prosecutor's absence, said he had not given prisoner authority to sign or cash the order. Prisoner was committed for trial at the ensuing Quarter Sessions, and allowed bail in sums amounting to £100.

The same prisoner was committed for trial on a charge of having forged the name of Beale and Co. to a money order for £6.

Peter Cellotti, Auguste Carlusi, and Elizabeth Cellotti were charged with having cut and wounded James White. These were the prisoners, it will be remembered, whose house in Hay-street was stoned by larrikins on the occasion of their indulging in music. In that instance they issued from their house, it was said, to defend a friend whom the larrikins attacked when he went to ascertain why they were annoyed. They laid about them with sticks, and wounded a man named Harman, for which they were committed for trial. In the present instance the evidence was similar to that of the former one. The prosecutor, on April 22, saw the crowd of larrikins in Hay-street. He was in the Australian Hall at the time, and took no part in the disturbance they created. On coming out to inquire why the disturbance was taking place, the prisoners, who appeared much excited, ran up to him and struck him on the arms; on turning to go away he received a blow on the head, which caused him to fall, and while he was down he was further assaulted. His injuries were such as to necessitate his being taken to the Infirmary. The prosecutor's statement was corroborated by an eye-witness. Witnesses were called to show that the prisoners acted in self-defence; but the Bench considered that a prima facie case had been established, and committed the prisoners for trial.

WATER POLICE COURT.

The Water Police Magistrate was assisted on the bench yesterday by Messrs. Brown, Cane, Lyel, Scott, E. Greville, A. Cruikshank, and B. Palmer; and in the Summons Court by Messrs. Senior, Stanley, Hyam, and M'Lean.

George Binks, of Redfern, for cruelly illtreating a horse by thrashing it unnecessarily, on April 23, was fined 40s. and costs.

Israel Levey was charged with stealing two gold brooches, some earrings, and a wedding-ring, of an aggregate value of £8, and the property of Maurice Isenberg. The jewellery was kept in a drawer. Levey was a lodger at Isenberg's, and pawned some of the articles. He was committed for trial at the Quarter Sessions, to be held on May 30.

Maurice J. Moore was charged with feloniously wounding one James Richards, with intent to do him grievous bodily harm. Richards was an assistant at the Garden Palace Hotel, George-street. Moore went into that place on Tuesday, May 3, when Richards made a jocular remark in a manner similar, it was alleged, to what the other was in the habit of doing. Moore endeavoured to catch hold of Richards, but did not succeed in doing so. Afterwards, however, he got a water bottle and broke it on Richards' head. Prisoner was committed for trial at the Quarter Sessions. Bail was granted, the prisoner in his own bond of £40, and two sureties of £20 each.

George Livock, a little boy, having pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing about 10d. from the till in the bar of the Newcastle Hotel, Erskine-street, his father was ordered to enter into his own bond of £5 for the future good behaviour of his son.

NEWTOWN POLICE COURT.

A Revision Court was held yesterday for the electorate of Newtown. Present: Messrs. W. Jolly, W. Kendall, and Frank S. Fielder, Js.P. Mr. Jolly was elected chairman. There was not one claim nor objection, and but two corrections. The business concluded with a unanimous compliment to sub-inspector Larkins and his officers for the extreme care with which the work had been conducted. Thos. H. Yeomans, for being on the premises of Thos. Colbert for unlawful purposes, was sentenced to 7 days in gaol, and for having in his possession clothing reasonably supposed to be stolen, he was fined 40s., or one month, in addition.

AN EXTRAORDINARY OCCURRENCE AT ROCHESTER, VICTORIA.

The correspondent of the Argus reports that a sensational affair, to which much mystery at present attaches, occurred at Rochester West on Saturday night or Sunday morning. About 7 o'clock on Sunday morning a young man named John James M'Coll arrived at the police station in a great state of excitement, with nothing on but his shirt, and reported that a man named Hugh Lavery had attempted during the night to murder him, first by poisoning him and then by shooting him, and that in self-defence he had wrenched the gun from Lavery and struck him over the head with the stock of it three or four times, felling him senseless to the floor. Constable Kilfedder and Constable O'Keefe at once proceeded to the hut, a two-roomed dwelling situated about four miles from the town, where the occurrence was said to have taken place. On their arrival Lavery was not there, but they discovered evidence of a struggle having taken place. The floor was bespattered with blood, an iron bar, a broken gun with the barrel loaded, and a cup containing white crystallised dregs were found in the room, while outside the window were footprints, supporting the statement made by M'Coll, that he had made his exit by the window after knocking Lavery down. From this place they proceeded to the residence of a Mr. William Doherty, on a neighbouring farm, distant about a mile, and learned that Lavery had arrived there in a terrible plight, and had been conveyed into Rochester. On return this was found to be true. Lavery had been brought in and taken to the Criterion Hotel, where shortly afterwards his injuries were attended to by Dr. Courtenay. These were of a very serious character, consisting of extensive lacerated wounds on the left side of the skull, spreading over a large area, and forming one mass of pulp, whilst a large gash marked the right side near the top of the head. The wounds were so close, and the whole left side of the scalp so battered, that individual dressing could not be resorted to by the medical gentleman, but no fracture could be discerned in the skull. Lavery lay in a very precarious condition during the day and night, but this morning his condition had slightly improved, though his chance of recovery is considered by the doctor to be a remote one. By the midday train, however, he was conveyed to Sandhurst, there to be admitted to the gaol hospital. M'Coll had been placed in custody on a charge of inflicting grievous bodily harm, and was brought up this morning before Mr. P. Doherty, J.P., and remanded for a week. Lavery, against whom an information for the attempted murder of M'Coll had been made, was remanded pro formâ. The true facts of the affair cannot yet be elicited, for the statement of the young man M'Coll and the depositions of Lavery, which were taken before a justice of the peace, are at direct variance. M'Coll states that about 12 o'clock on Saturday night, as he was lying in bed in Lavery's dwelling, Lavery entered, and offered him a cup of hot water and brandy; that he (M'Coll) drank a mouthful of it, and finding it intensely bitter, refused to drink any more. He asked Lavery to taste it, but he declined. Lavery then went out of the room, and shortly after M'Coll was seized with severe pains in the stomach and a twitching of the limbs, and he at once suspected that he was poisoned, and followed Lavery, and besought him to go for assistance. This Lavery refused to do, and M'Coll returned to his bed. Lavery soon after re-entered with a loaded gun, and said he must shoot him. M'Coll begged of him not to shoot, and Lavery replied that he would not shoot him if he signed a transfer of the property which was M'Coll's to him. After repeated threatenings, he signed the document, whereupon Lavery, remarking that he had gone so far in his threats that he must now kill him, presented the gun again. M'Coll sprang forward, seized the barrel, wrenched it from him, and then dealt him three or four blows over the head with the stock, breaking the gun at the breech, and felling Lavery to the ground. Lavery's depositions are to the effect that they had disagreed a good deal of late, and that, in consequence of continued bickerings, he desired to get his land, which he had transferred to M'Coll, re-transferred back to him, and asked M'Coll to do so. M'Coll refused when he asked him on Sunday morning about 5 o'clock, and without another word lifted up a piece of iron bar which was in the room, said he would kill him, and struck him three heavy blows on the head with it. He remembered no more till some time after. Lavery is well known throughout both the Rochester and Kyneton districts, having for a great number of years carried on farming in the latter place as well as Rochester. The dregs remaining in the cup when found were handed to Dr. Courtenay, who, on applying the usual tests, pronounced them to be strychnine.

GRAND FATTENING STATION.

TULLOONA.

GWYDIR DISTRICT.

PITT, SON, and BADGERY have received instructions from Messrs. Gill and Pain to offer by public auction, at the Exchange, Sydney, on WEDNESDAY, 15th June next, at 12 o'clock,
Their well-known fattening station in the Gwydir district, known as TULLOONA.
and comprising the blocks or runs—Tulloona, Tulloona South, Tay Green and Tay Green South, of an estimated area of 220,000 acres.
Together with about
100,000 sheep
3,500 Cattle
20,000 acres land.

The run which is situate about 50 miles from Warialda, 40 ditto from Moree, 30 ditto from Goondiwindi, Queensland, and 100 miles from Narrabri (to which the railway is now being constructed) is surrounded by the noted fattening properties of Messrs. Dangar, Adams, Brown, Doyle, and Dr. Jenkins.

The country consists of myall and salt bush plains, with occasional belts of timber, the whole being of the richest fattening description, and very heavily grassed.

The owners have expended a very large sum of money, in improving and securing the run, and it is estimated to carry quite 50,000 more sheep than those now depasturing on it.

The fencing is all new and substantial, and consists principally of 6 wires and top rail, and 5 wires.

Of the Sheep, about 35,000 are lambing ewes, the balance being wethers up to 4 years and younger sheep; they bear an excellent reputation, and the wool realised in the May sales last year up to 15d per lb in the grease.

The Cattle are a good lot, about half being of fattening age, and there are now 500 bullocks ready for market.

The Terms will be one third cash and the balance at 1, 2, and 3 years, bearing interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum. Taking into consideration the fact that the purchaser will have a return of over £30,000 within six months, the terms may be looked on as exceedingly liberal.

The Agents would strongly advise capitalists on the look out for an exceptionally good property to inspect Tulloona, for they can from long personal knowledge testify to its being one of the most heavily grassed and best fattening runs in New South Wales.

Any further information can be had on application to the agents.

ON THE LAWN,
at the site of the NEW RAILWAY STATION, at half-past 12 o'clock, on SATURDAY, 21st May,

That select subdivision into VILLA LOTS of the GRAND OLD ESTATE of
boasting an antiquity coeval with this country's history, these broad pasture slopes, dotted with fine old English oaks, cannot fail to afford an interesting hour of contemplation to purchasers when the labour and excitement shall have ended for the day; and in the ruined walls, lying prostrate, which once formed the OLD MANSION, the buyer will probably read no uninteresting chapter of AUSTRALIAN COLONISATION in the past age.

This peaceful spot, where population, manners, and customs remained fixed, while the great torrent of migration and improvement swept past unobserved, is now, for the first time, being introduced to a discerning city public by means of a
and the listless repose of the place, whither one might steal from the world and its distractions to dream quietly away the remnant of a troubled life, will shortly awake to the REALITY of the BUSY HUM OF TRADE.

Eternal springtime, as it were, reigns in this salubrious INLAND climate, the nature of which should induce many sufferers from chest and kindred complaints to seek some more genial air than that around our fair harbour; and it will be no small gain to find just the spot so suitable, and upon which, we may add, they may rely with confidence.

THE SALE TAKES PLACE ON SATURDAY, 21st MAY,
and for that day a SPECIAL TRAIN has been arranged, full particulars of which will shortly be published.
